African-American Obituaries
Danville (KY) Advocate-Messenger and other local sources
13 May 1996 through 31 Dec 2012

PLEASE NOTE: These entries were gleaned from obituaries printed in the Danville Advocate-Messenger, the Harrodsburg Herald, or from funeral home records of the area. NOT EVERY AFRICAN-AMERICAN who died or was buried in the area is listed. In finding for these obituaries, I searched for such terms as "AME," "Smith-Jackson," "Hilldale," Springhill," in short, terms which have historically been associated with African-Americans. Since cemeteries are now integrated, some of these entries may well be of non-African-Americans. However, in Danville at least, references to an A.M.E. church, or to the Smith-Jackson Funeral Home, or even to the Hilldale Cemetery, are often good indications that the deceased was, in fact, African-American, and I have assumed that in these entries.

These obituaries came from various sources in and around Danville and Boyle County, including the Danville Advocate-Messenger and the Harrodsburg Herald, as well as funeral homes in the area. The dates of coverage and sources of information are:

1996 - 13 May through 31 December
1997 - 1 January through 31 March
1999 - 1 September through 31 October
2000 - 1 January through 31 December. These obituaries are gleaned from Mercer County funeral homes. They are included here because there are many references to places and people in Boyle County.
2001 - 1 July through 31 December. These obituaries are also gleaned from Mercer County funeral homes. They are included here because there are many references to places and people in Boyle County.

2002 - 1 January through 31 December. These obituaries are also gleaned from Mercer County funeral homes. They are included here because there are many references to places and people in Boyle County.

2003 - 1 August through 31 December with occasional entries prior to August. Obituaries from the Danville Advocate-Messenger have the date appended to the end of the obituary. All others are from an unlisted source, possibly the Harrodsburg Herald.
2004 - 1 January through 31 December with occasional obituaries from other sources. Entries with dates in bold at end are from the Advocate-Messenger. Others are from unknown sources, possibly the Harrodsburg Herald.
1 Jan 2005 through 31 Dec 2011 are from the Advocate-Messenger.

BUFFORD, Melinda Bufford, Wednesday March 18, 2009, 1935-2009. Melinda R. Bufford, 73, died March 8, 2009, in Cincinnati, Ohio, after a prolonged illness. Born March 21, 1935, in Danville, Ky., she was a daughter of the late Thomas and Dora E. Revely. She was the second oldest born to a family of five children. After graduating from Central State University, Melinda embarked on a teaching career in Los Angeles, Calif. Later, she settled in Shaker Heights, Ohio, teaching for the Cleveland City school district. Lynne, as she was know to most, enjoyed being surrounded by close friends and family. She and husband Turner had many fortuitous opportunities to travel to exotic locations with those they held dear. The stories that lingered from those trips reflected some of her happiest moments in life. Lynne also took great pleasure in giving back. She volunteered her time with many organizations that provided care to the hungry, the homeless and the home-bound. Lynne forged many special relationships along her "Meals on Wheels" route. She opened her home to several foreign exchange students and offered care and concern for them and their families long after their departures. Lynne loved First Church and was so grateful for it's congregation and the solace they provided. She was very proud to be a member and demonstrated that pride in varied modes of participation. She also adored the Arts and looked forward to her times volunteering at the Cleveland Art Museum. Lynne spent her last years in Cincinnati under exceptional and loving care from her younger brother, Thomas Revely III, and his wife Denise, who survive. She also is survived by a daughter, Kim Kovach; son-in-law Phil; two grandchildren, Melia and Keali; three sisters, Dolores Alston, Gladys Davis and Rita Smith; and nieces and nephews. In lieu of flowers, contributions in her name may be made to First Church, Cleveland, or The Cleveland Food Bank. A Memorial Service will be held 2 p.m. Saturday at Smith-Jackson Funeral Home. Burial will be in Hilldale Cemetery.

BUGG. Jason Bugg, 77, 747 Fairview Court, died Monday, April 24, 2000, of an apparent heart attack. He was pronounced dead by Mercer County Coroner Sonny Ransdell when he was found in his vehicle in the back of Beaumont Plaza. According to a Harrodsburg Police report, Bugg was operating the vehicle when he apparently suffered a fatal heart attack. The car traveled uncontrolled heading north in the back of the parking lot and struck a concrete pole. Born November 5, 1922 in Washington County, Bugg was the son of the late Thomas Allen and Zanie Lowe Bugg. He was a former owner of the Redwood Restaurant and he attended the University of Cincinnati as an engineering major. He was a U.S. Army Air Corps veteran of World War II, where he received an EAME ribbon with three bronze stars and an Air Medal with three oak leaf clusters. At age 21, while a staff sergeant in the U.S. Army Air Corps, Bugg was shot down in May of 1944 and his family was notified he was missing in action, and a few weeks later, told he had been killed. He was awarded the Purple Heart posthumously and his parents received a personal commendation from President Franklin D. Roosevelt praising his death in service to his country. About six months later, his family learned he was alive and being held a prisoner of war by the Germans, first in Germany and then in Poland. In February 1945, he and nearly 10,000 fellow POWs were forced to march 56 days over 700 miles out of Poland into Germany to avoid the advancing Russian front. Bugg endured the march and 18 months of being a prisoner of war. He returned home to his family in Harrodsburg and for nearly 40 years, he did not speak of his war experiences. Finally, in 1983, he began to reminisce with other veterans about his experiences and his story was shared in a book about the 409th Bomb Group of World War II. He also learned that the Army still had him listed as killed in action. The mistake was corrected. After returning to Harrodsburg, Bugg had a career as a successful business man and was involved in many areas of local civic life. He was a partner in the White Cottage Restaurant and owned the Redwood Restaurant. He was on the founding board of directors of the Fort Harrod Drama, served three terms as president of the Mercer Chamber of Commerce, was president of the Harrodsburg Rotary Club and treasurer of the Jaycees. He is survived by four sons, Allen and Edward Lynn Bugg, both of Lexington; David Thomas Bugg, Hopkinsville; Everett Lawrence Bugg, Richmond; one daughter, Brenda Marie Elkins, New Albany, IN; three brothers, Marvin Bugg, Henderson; Sterling Bugg, Oxnard, CA, and Warren Bugg, Danville, and seven grandchildren. Graveside services were held Wednesday, April 26, at the Camp Nelson National Cemetery with Dr. Robert DeFoor officiating. Pallbearers were Kim Knight, Barry Elkins, Byron Bugg, Brice Long, Mike Calhoun and Wayne Bugg. Expressions of sympathy may take the form of donations to the Disabled American Veterans, Harrodsburg, KY 40330. Alexander and Royalty Funeral Home was in charge of arrangements.

A second visitation will be noon Friday at First Trinity Missionary Baptist Church in Jeffersonville, Ind., with burial to follow in Eastern Cemetery in Jeffersonville. Smith-Jackson Funeral Home is in charge of local arrangements. Sunday, August 19, 2012. HILL, Richard Eugene Sr: In more than three decades as a pastor, Rev. Richard Hill touched people far beyond the walls of his own church. The Jeffersonville, Ind., native, who spent 31 years leading one of Danville's landmark religious institutions — First Baptist Church, Second and Walnut — died Thursday at age 79. "He was a pastor in the truest since of the word, who was so concerned about everyone's spiritual growth," said granddaughter Janna Hill. "He not only talked the talk, but he walked the walk. He wasn't any different when he walked away from the pulpit than he was in public.". Hill came to Danville in 1974 after spending 12 years at Mill Street Baptist Church in London. First Baptist's membership grew from about 200 to more than 1,000 during his tenure, but it was the baptisms, conversions and chances to be part of people's lives he relished as much as full pews. . In a news story about Hill's retirement from the pulpit in 2005, he spoke to a reporter about developing a love for the church where he would spend most of his life. "Every time we passed by First Baptist, my wife, Mary, and I would comment on how beautiful it was and how lucky the pastor was to have this church," said Hill. "It would a be a dream to be the pastor here, I thought then. I never dreamed I would or could be.". Those who knew him said he took education seriously and after his graduation from Jeffersonville High School in Indiana. He attended an Indiana University extension program in Jeffersonville, followed by a two-year stint in the U.S. Army. He earned bachelor's degrees from Simmons Bible College in Louisville and Cumberland College, along with a master's degree from Union College. Hill eventually followed the path of his grandfathers and was ordained a minister in the National Baptist Convention of America Inc., a predominately African-American denomination. He was a past president of the Danville-Boyle County Ministerial Association and the Kentucky Baptist Unified Christian Leadership Conference. "Rev. Hill often told of how he came from humble beginnings, but he was so concerned with getting educated in order to do God's work that he would ride his bicycle from Jeffersonville across the bridge to Simmons Bible College in Louisville," said Minnie Frye, who has been a member of First Baptist for 56 years, most of them with Hill as pastor. "He was well known, not only in this community, but across the state and country for being an educated man of God. People said he was a 'Christian gentleman' and that was really true. Other pastors respected him a great deal.". Hill's involvement in the community was widely felt, including his role in helping revitalize the local NAACP chapter. Among his many service activities, he spent time on the boards of the local Red Cross and the Danville Housing Authority, which allowed him to focus on fair housing for all Danville residents, a personal passion. "The highlight of this ministry, in my opinion, is the great number of people that we have helped," Hill said in the 2005 article. "Scores and scores and scores of people, both black and white. We have provided food and temporary shelter and paid the bills for local people in financial crisis and also paid for vouchers so the transients coming through this community could have a meal at a local restaurant and stay at a local motel.". Family and friends said Hill always had a keen interest in helping people who had problems or had made mistakes in their lives. Prior to devoting himself full time to ministry, he worked as a field services coordinator with Cumberland River Comprehensive Care in¿Corbin, dealing with those addicted to drugs and alcohol. Another of Hill's granddaughters — and Janna's twin sister — Lanna Hill, said his compassion wasn't confined to Danville. During a phone call to her grandparents following the 2010 earthquake that devastated Haiti, she said she could hear Hill weeping in the background as he watched news reports about the hardship people were experiencing. "He thought about others no matter what their race, gender, ethnicity or age," said Lanna Hill. "His love just transcended all of those boundaries." . Sisters Priscilla and Mavis McCowan, who came of age in Hill's church and have been lifelong members, recalled Hill serving as a mentor and an example through his knowledge of and strict adherence to scripture. They said he was just as likely to reach out to someone in a jail cell as he was a shutin. Priscilla McCowan, though, said it was a trip Hill made to visit their ailing father that left a lasting impression about how much he cared for others. Several years ago, when McCowan's father was scheduled to be admitted to a Lexington hospital for surgery at 6 a.m. on a January morning following a massive ice storm, Hill beat the family to the hospital. As much as he cared for others, Hill's own family said he delighted in being with his loved ones. Janna Hill, a Danville native who now lives in Atlanta, will remember a doting grandparent who loved spending time with his family, which included his wife Mary, children Dana Yeast and Richard Jr. and David Hill, 13 grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren. Hill also was a needed male influence in the lives of his granddaughters. Janna Hill said he eagerly filled the role and helped her avoid the pitfalls many young women face when a father isn't actively involved. "I was so lucky to have him as a father figure," Hill said. "I never felt like I missed out on anything because of his place in my life.". For complete obituary information see page 2 of today's The Advocate-Messenger. Sunday, August 19, 2012.
