FROM THE COMMANDER

Mark your calendar: Planning ramps up for Aug. 18-20, 2006 meeting in Middletown

Greetings to all members:

I want to introduce you to the new editor of The Middler, Reginald W. Bacon. He comes from a publishing background, and I know he will bring a fresher, more informative, and complete newsletter than we have had. I am very pleased and grateful that he has consented to this task.

August 18-20, 2006 is our regularly scheduled triennial meeting, as called for in our constitution and bylaws. So far we have had dismal response to our inquiry as to whether people think they will come for this meeting. Therefore we changed the date so that it is not over the Labor Day weekend. We hope this makes a difference and we will see more there. This is an election meeting and we need as many members there as possible.

We are going to have the meeting in a place where costs are minimal. We tried the all-in-one-place idea and found it is too costly with so few attending. So we will try to book a block of rooms at a motel or hotel in the area, but are looking at the Godfrey Library or other place for the meetings. Some aspects of the one place idea were good. We were able to have a gathering place and we will strive to have that again somehow. Planned times for research at various libraries will also be available. We are still getting ideas on activities, etc. We will also find a restaurant for our banquet. We all had a wonderful time in 2003 even though the group was small, and we will do so again this time I am certain. I hope to see many of you next August 18-21 in Middletown.

In the six years since our founding, the officers have been working to make it a good organization and one in which you can be proud to belong. Are we there yet? Not by a long shot, but we continue to improve things slowly. We do ask for people to step up to the plate and support our efforts and our meetings. We are always willing to listen to suggestions and ideas from you. We are convinced the potential for growth is there. We have to find what gives people the most incentive to join. One thing we know is that there are

We changed the date so it is not over the Labor Day weekend. We hope this makes a difference and we will see more there. This is an election meeting and we need as many members there as possible.

SMFSD Founder Gale Cornwall relocates, looks toward '06 meeting

In an e-mail communication to SMFSD officers in early September, Gale Cornwall, the organization’s founder, announced his relocation to Carmichael, Calif., near Sacramento, effective Sept. 9, 2005. His new address: Atria Seniors Facility, 2426 Garfield Ave., #B-1, Carmichael, CA 95608; phone: (916) 977-0844. Gale wrote “I’m doing OK and good Lord willing will attend (SMFSD meeting) in 2006. I will be 80+ then but if alive and kicking will see you in Middletown. Please advise all concerned.”

(Editor’s note: Many would agree that the “all concerned” referred to includes the entire SMFSD membership that is indebted to Gale Cornwall’s initiative and energy in founding the organization in 2000.)

From Donald A. Sage of Roseville Minn., descendant of David Sage:
“I have been doing quite a lot of research on the Sage name and the origin of the Sage name in America from David Sage (b. 1639). I was informed and sent a list by the Godfrey Library of 10 pages (index) of Sage names and events listed in the Barbour Collection and listed under Middletown, Conn. I don’t think there has been a current & complete updated genealogy of the Sage family for many years. I am trying to put together our branch and have about 12 generations including myself pretty much sorted out. (I think?). The first plat map of Middletown showing those original inhabitants might make a good story to review in The Middler someday.”

From Averill Smith Pappalardo of Wellesley, Mass., a descendant of George Hubbard:
“In looking over the list of the First Settlers, I have just realized that I have a little information on another of the men, William Smith. William moved around a lot. He was in Wethersfield, died in Farmington, but was also in Middletown in 1649, according to Savage. I am not descended from him, but from his brother Simon, who was a first settler of Haddam, Conn. I have not spent a great deal of time researching William, but have accumulated this while searching for Simon. I used to have William’s wife as Elizabeth Standley; now have her with a question mark since I can’t

GODFREY LIBRARY NEWS

With Godfrey Library future secure, Thomas Kemp steps down as Director

Editor’s Note: On Oct. 11, 2005 Godfrey Library Director Thomas J. Kemp announced he accepted a new position. The Acting Director will be Richard E. Black, Godfrey’s current Outreach Librarian. In three years Kemp made our home-base library into a national resource through the Godfrey Scholar internet genealogy portal. In his last week at Godfrey, he assisted with our 2006 meeting plans.

Oct. 11, 2005

Friends,
I wanted to let you know that I am stepping down as the Director of the Godfrey Memorial Library later this month (Oct. 21 -Ed.).

It has been an honor to work with you, the staff, our members, and all associated with the library. I am very pleased with all that has been accomplished in the past three years.

It is difficult to leave the library at any time but it is gratifying to know that the library is now on a firm financial footing, with a strong future and will remain so with its hard working, knowledgeable staff, board, volunteers, and thousands of members across the country.

I have accepted the position of Director of Genealogy Products with NewsBank, Inc. (Naples, Fla.). I look forward to seeing many of you as our paths cross at conferences across the country.

All the best as you continue to climb your family tree. It will be impressive to watch the library continue to grow in the years ahead.
I am just sorry that I will not be here to see first hand all that is yet to be accomplished.

Onward,
Tom
‘Dunham-Wilcox-Trott-Kirk’ web site makes Jane Devlin a friend to Middletown researchers

A profile of the person behind the scenes at this valuable information source

Editor’s Note: Anyone using the internet for Middletown genealogy research in recent years has undoubtedly come across Jane Devlin’s ever-growing Dunham-Wilcox-Trott-Kirk web site, a compendium of vital records, cemetery records, and local history for the central Connecticut region and beyond. Jane, who lives in Lake Orion, Michigan, but whose roots extend to Middlesex County, agreed to an e-mail interview with The Middler so members could get a glimpse of the real person behind this gem of a genealogy resource.

The Middler: What motivated you to create the web site?
Jane: The Dunham-Wilcox-Trott-Kirk site (named for my grandparents) started out as a simple family tree in hopes of connecting with more cousins. I had put quite a bit of effort into documenting what I could and thought that having it on the web would garner corrections and new information as well as helping others with the same lines.

The Middler: What was on the site when it was first launched?
Jane: I put the first files online in January 2001. At first it was just my descendant reports and brick walls.

The Middler: What stage were you at in your own family history research when you launched the site?
Jane: About where you see it now. I’ve put far more effort into getting records on line than I have on my own research. Sometime soon, I need to sit down and pull the new information on my families off the site and update my database.

The Middler: At what point did you decide to expand your vision for the web site? How did you decide on what would be included?
Jane: I had transcribed records for a site that Ray Brown was managing in 1999. That site went offline and I still had the material, so I decided that it should be available to others. Since then, it has grown like Topsy. I started the Middlesex County mail list on RootsWeb in February 1999, because I had so many ancestors from the area, and there wasn’t a mailing list at the time or much on-line. At first the site was Middlesex County material along with other Connecticut counties for which I’d transcribed records. Ray, whose New England Genealogy site is another great source, was instrumental in sending me hard copy. Without his help and encouragement, the site would have never materialized.

As I was able to find more out-of-copyright material, I expanded the scope first to areas where I had ancestors and then to anything I could find from those states. After Connecticut, I added Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Jersey, New York, Michigan, and family-specific files.

The Middler: Tell us about your many valuable collaborators.
Jane: When Coralynn Brown started helping, the site really expanded! Ray was feeding records to both of us as he lives in Connecticut and could go to the State Library in Hartford, and after transcribing, the data would go online both on my site and on Ray’s. We’ve always worked on the theory that the more places data could be found, the more useful

Prolific transcriber Coralynn Brown takes a short break from the keyboard

Editor’s Note: A profile of Jane Devlin’s Dunham-Wilcox-Trott-Kirk web site would be incomplete without getting to know one of the site’s most prolific transcribers, Arizona-based Coralynn Brown. Connected to Middletown through first settlers George Hubbard and William Smith, her roots also extend to Hartford and Haddam, Conn.

The Middler: When did you begin researching your central Connecticut family history? Are you still involved in your own research, or is your focus now on your transcription projects?
Coralynn: I began this research in 1999 when, upon receiving family trees from my sister, I began to check on the accuracy. Going online, I noticed George Hubbard had been entered on many trees incorrectly. The “two Georges” were so entwined I decided to separate them for good and all, and then share what I had found. That led to a Hubbard website still going strong today.

PLACES

Middletown’s southern neighbors – Haddam & E. Haddam

Editor’s Note: Thanks to Donald Brock for this contribution. Source: History of Middlesex County, Conn., Beers & Co., N.Y., 1884.

The original Haddam tract included East Haddam, and was purchased from four Indian kings in 1662, for 30 coats, of a value not exceeding $100. As with colonial Middletown families, our Haddam neighbors used the Connecticut River as their highway, connecting them with the outside world.

Haddam was granted the privileges of the 20th town in the Connecticut colony in the late 1660s, and they adopted the name Haddam from a town in England. The town was divided in 1734 between Haddam on the west of the Connecticut River and East Haddam on the east.

The first settlement in East Haddam was around Creek Row, which today is near Brainard State Park just north of East Haddam center. Of the early Haddam names, many of also appear in Middletown.

In doing genealogical research, Haddam cemetery sites are unique in that for many years after early settlement, the people of East Haddam carried their dead across the river to Haddam for burial. Not long after 1700, a funeral party of mourners bearing the deceased crossed the cove and the narrow peninsula of Haddam Neck, and then attempted to cross the Connecticut River, but failed. The river had overflowed its banks, and floating ice made passage impossible. Slowly and sadly, the funeral procession was forced to retrace its steps back through ice and snow to East Haddam. They picked a site to bury the deceased in the forest there, in a romantic spot back away from the cove, and thus commenced the Cove Burial Ground now known today as Grave Yard Point.

prove it. More work needs to be done by someone on this. Actual marriage “Vital Record” says, “William Smeth was married to [Eliz?] in August one thousand six hundred forty & fower.” (In Original Distribution of the Town of Hartford (Conn.) among the settlers, 1639, transcribed by Lucius M. Boltwood in the New England Historical & Genealogical Register, Vol. 12, p. 331.)”

From Deborah Hanna of Storrs, Conn., descendant of George Stocking:

“I wanted to send on some information about my Stockings of Middletown (Upper Houses). These two were very interesting, and hope this will be of interest to someone else: Two descendents of George Stocking, cousins two generations away from each other who married.

The two cousins who married: (1) Bethea Kirby (1731-1823) was the 2nd great-granddaughter of George Stocking – and the wife of George’s 2nd great-grandson. (2) Daniel Stocking (1728-1800) was the 2nd great-grandson of George Stocking – and the husband of the 2nd great-granddaughter of George Stocking.

“In 1714 the school committee consisted of Joseph Ranney, Sgt. William Savage and John Sage. Samuel Gibson, Samuel Stow, and John Warner made up the committee in 1715/1716. They hired Mrs. Joseph Smith for three months at five pounds and levied a school tax of two pence on a pound to secure funds for the school building. Other teachers included Thomas Webb (1715/16, 1716/17, two three-month terms), Charles Goodrich (1715), William Prout (1717), Mrs. Thomas Stow (daughter of Deacon Samuel Stocking, 1720), and Jonathan Boardman (of Rocky Hill, six months 1719/20). These teachers had little preparation for teaching. A new era began in 1748 when Daniel Stocking became the teacher. A Yale graduate, Stocking became well-known for his teaching skills and commonly received the title “Master Stocking.”

Daniel Stocking and Bethea Kirby’s ancestry:

George Stocking 1582 + Anna George 1582 + Anna Samuel Stocking 1620 + Bethea Hopkins Daniel Stocking 1677 + Jane Mould Bethia 1658 + Thomas Stowe 1650 (Daniel and Bethea were brother and sister) Joseph Stocking 1703 + Abigail Ranney Hannah Stow 1696 + John Kirby 1691 Daniel Stocking 1728 + Bethea Kirby 1731

The line continues down to Seth, and eventually gets to my Mom.”

Main Street, Middletown, Conn., 1790-1800

In September 1836 Joseph Barratt, M.D., drew his "plan of Middletown showing its buildings and occupants." At least two versions exist, one 1790-1800, another 1770-1775, both substantially the same. This adaptation for easier readability uses the original as a template and retains the art, but resets and repositions the type. It also integrates some information from both versions. In 1800 there are still first-settler family names on Main Street: Bacon, Cornwall, Hall, Hamlin, Stocking, and Wetmore; plus many other pre-1700 family names.

Jane joined that website and we began e-mail correspondence. We both had many Middlesex County ancestors, and decided this was the place on which to concentrate.

My own family research occasionally gets pushed ahead, but you can only work on brick walls so long until your head hurts. My focus is on transcribing, because (1) in 1999 the popular wisdom was that “you can’t do genealogy online,” and I wanted to change that; and (2) It becomes addictive. People e-mail and say they’ve finally found an ancestor, which results in me charging ahead with even more determination.

The Middler: Have you made research trips to Connecticut?

Coralynn: I lived in Michigan for 20 years, close to where Jane lives, though our paths never crossed. In 1982 I moved to Phoenix, Arizona.

We have a daughter who lives in Stratford, Conn., who we visit once or twice a year. We go to the Godfrey Library one day of our vacation there to photocopied cemetery records, etc., and have gone to the cemeteries in Middletown and Haddam to take photos. One of my first goals was to get the enumeration for Mortimer Cemetery, which I did; this was the first thing I transcribed and sent to Jane for her website.

The Middler: How many pages do you think you have transcribed over the years? What has been the most difficult project undertaken?

Coralynn: I’d estimate about 15,000 pages, give or take a thousand. But who’s counting? I spend two to four hours a day transcribing, depending on my motivation. When I began I was typing eight hours a day until I realized I was overdoing it.

The most intense period was that first project: the Mortimer Cemetery; that’s the one I spent eight hours a day on. The most difficult, or ambitious, was the Genealogical & Family History of Northern New York, with the Middletown Barbour and the Vital Records of Bridgewater, Mass. a close second/third. I enjoy accomplishing something that no one in their right mind would even consider.

The Middler: Do you keyboard everything in manually, or use optical character recognition software?

Coralynn: Until quite recently I typed out every word. Dave (husband Dave Swerdleger) convinced me to try OCR, which I’ve used on a couple projects, Middletown Upper Houses being one of them. Some projects just “feel” right if I type them, however.

The Middler: What transcription project has been the most rewarding?

Coralynn: I have had more positive feedback from Middletown Upper Houses than any other transcription, which makes it the most rewarding. If people use it and find information, it’s rewarding.

(Middletown Upper Houses is also available on HeritageQuest via the Godfrey Library. Jane and I encourage everyone to join Godfrey, as it is the best deal in genealogy today.)

The Middler: What do you do in “real life?” (People like to read about the behind-the-scenes individual who on weekends scales Himalayan peaks or tours with a punk-rock band . . .)

Coralynn: Sorry about not scaling the Himalayas. I spend quite a bit of time knitting. I have always loved to write. Another woman and I have been writing a demented story about our royal ancestors for five years; a time-travel science fiction, sort of Back to the Future meets The Lion in Winter. It would make a great TV series.

I have a degree in music education from the Crane School of Music, Potsdam, N.Y., and taught public school music in New York and Michigan. In Arizona I subbed and gave piano lessons in my home.

Both Dave and I spend time with the grandchildren. The youngest lives in Connecticut, which brings us full circle, that being an area I am more than eager to spend time in.

FIRST SETTLER PROFILE

Middletown First Settler Thomas Allen

Editor’s Note: Past Middler profiles included William Blumfield, William Cornwall, Giles Hamlin, Daniel Harris, Samuel Stocking, & John Stow.

Neither David Field nor Henry Whittemore had anything to say about Thomas Allen in their respective Middletown histories of 1853 and 1884. But in the Middletown Penny Press of Oct. 11, 1900, Frank Farnsworth Starr profiled all first settlers in an issue devoted to the town’s 250th Anniversary celebration. Here is Thomas Allen’s profile:

“Thomas Allen is considered to have been one of the company of white men who commenced a settlement at Mattabeseck in 1650. His home lot on the east side of Main Street was bounded north by the burying ground and meeting house yard, and east by the Great River.

In 1656 he was appointed the grave digger, and two years later the town leased the burying ground to him for 10 years, preserving the right of burial therein.

He held the office of Fence Viewer, was three times chosen Townsman, and was a Deputy to the General Court. He was one of the persons who organized the First Church in 1668, and in 1670 was elected one of the Deacons. In 1685 he was named as one of the persons to receive a patent of the town from the Colonial authorities.

Nothing is known about his first wife, except that she was probably living in December 1668. His second wife was Martha, widow of Roger Gipson. Having no children of his own he made a will, in which, after providing for his wife, gave the property to his nephew, Obadiah Allen, and his wife’s Gipson children. Deacon Thomas Allen died in October 1688, and his widow, Martha, in May 1690.”
Jane Devlin’s web site a boon to researchers

it would be. Janice Streig has submitted transcriptions of the Middlesex County deeds from the FHHL microfilms, which are great for proving family connections. She’s also submitted tombstone photographs. Now Coralynn’s husband, Dave Swerdleger, is helping with Massachusetts vital records. Without these four, the site would be a shadow of what it is, and the best part is that they’ve become friends. There have been many others who have submitted a file here and there and my thanks go out to all of them. Full credit is given to the person who transcribed the records.

The Middler: What awards and recognition has the web site earned?

Jane: 2003 - They Live Again Genealogy Excellence Award; 2003 - The Genealogical Journeys in Time Home Page Pick of the Month; 2003 - Golden Gate Genealogy Forum Best Site Pick; 2002 - Family Tree Magazine Site of the Day. The site has also received nice reviews in the RootsWeb Review and Eastham’s Genealogy Newsletter. Best of all are the e-mails I get from people who have used the site and found information they needed. Also, in the newest issue of New England Ancestors from NEHGS, on page 47, in The Computer Genealogist listing of “Favorite Websites for Tracing New England Ancestors,” my site is mentioned! (Ray’s is, too).

The Middler: How much time do you spend working on the web site?

Jane: I’m not spending as much time as I should recently. Coralynn & Dave have been carrying the bulk of the transcription tasks as I’ve become more active in our local Senior Center where I teach knitting and knit for charity. If I could figure out how to transcribe at the same time I’m knitting, I’d be all set.

The Middler: Do you get a lot of e-mail feedback from researchers?

Jane: I have a wonderful folder of e-mails from people who like the site. I call those my “warm fuzzies” because they make me feel so good.

The Middler: What is the oddest e-mail you have received from a researcher? The most satisfying?

Jane: I get a few of the “My great-grandfather was John Smith. Send me everything you have about him,” messages: no dates, no location, no information to work with. I usually steer people to a mailing list for the name along with regrets that I can’t do more to help. One of the most satisfying was after putting a Middlesex County cemetery online, I got an e-mail that relatives had been trying for years to find where one person listed was buried.

The Middler: What are your current goals for the project?

Jane: Getting more data on line! Plus, I think it’s time to re-code the main page, as it’s getting quite large and probably cumbersome to download on a dial-up connection.

The Middler: How can members of the genealogy community help your site flourish?

Jane: If anyone has hard copies or electronic scans of out-of-copyright records they’d like to see online and would send them to me, I’ll get them transcribed and out there for others. One of the biggest limitations is finding data to put online. The latest revision of the copyright law puts a lot of data published after 1923 that would have normally passed into the public domain off-limits as lawmakers protected Mickey Mouse for Disney. I know Godfrey Library in Middletown has many more cemetery listings from the Hale Collection that were never copyrighted and that could be put online, but getting paper copies is expensive. If someone who lived locally had a scanner and would be allowed to scan the listings that would be a tremendous help.

The Middler: What do you do, as they say, in “real life”? Any background in history or research? What do you like to do when you are not thinking about genealogy?

Jane: I grew up on a farm in St. Clair County, Mich., where we had cows & chickens. I now live in Lake Orion, just north of Pontiac, Mich. With the exception of my maternal grandmother’s family, my ancestors have lived within 45 miles of here since the 1800s. When I started tracing my family, I discovered a lot of roads led to Middlesex County, in particular, to Haddam.

I majored in history & art at Oakland University in Rochester, Mich., and taught school before having two daughters. After years as a stay-at-home mom, I stumbled into a part time job designing printed circuit boards and I did that for 25 years until my position was sent over to China three years ago and I found myself prematurely retired. I also programmed software in four flavors of BASIC in the late 1970s & 1980s and taught myself HTML four years ago in order to put the site online.

I love research — that was the best part of studying history in college. I was reminded of that in 1997 when my youngest daughter had a college class in which she had to write a paper on the culture from which her family came. I received a panic phone call asking “What culture are we?” The only thing I could come up with on the spur of the moment was “American Farmer.” I started doing a little research online and at our library and sent her the results. It turns out that we were farmers dating back to colonial New England. She received an A+ on her paper and I was hooked on genealogy.

My hobbies, other than genealogy, are reading, knitting, quilting, & crocheting. I learned to knit when I was 8 and haven’t stopped since. In music, I’m basically a Grateful Dead fan who also likes folk music. I’m happily married, have two daughters who live in California and two wonderful grandchildren ages 6 & 4.

THE FINE PRINT – Some background for new & prospective members

The origins of Middletown . . . and a brief history of SMFSD

Editor’s Note: The following is paraphrased from the 1884 History of Middletown by Henry Whittimore (Beers Co., 1884), and A Pictorial History of Middletown by Elizabeth A. Warner (Greater Middletown Preservation Trust, 1990).

Middletown originally included Chatham, Portland, Cromwell, Middlefield, and a small part of Berlin, an area 16 x 9 miles.

Of native inhabitants before white settlement, south of Hartford, and extending south of Middletown, was a small but distinct population known as the Wampunks. Their chieftain, Sowheag, removed to Massabesic (Mattabesett or Mattabeseck to the English), now Middletown, in 1634 after a quarrel with settlers in Wethersfield. (He was accused of aiding the Pequots in their movement against settlers there.)

As early as 1639 the General Court recommended action against Indians in the area. Although there were settlements above and below Mattabesett, the hostile attitude of the Indians prevented the influx of settlers. Sometime before the settlement, however, Sowheag conveyed to Governor Haynes of Connecticut a large portion of the township.

In 1646 the General Court in Hartford appointed a committee to look into the planting of Mattabesett. On March 20, 1649/50, this committee reported that the land might support 15 families, but soon more arrived. The 1651 records state: “It is ordered sentenced and decreed that Mattabesett shall be a Towne, and that they shall bee choice of one of the inhabitants . . . that so hee may take the oath of a Constable, the next convenient season.”

In 1653, the General Court approved that the town be known as Middletown. By 1654 there were 31 taxable persons, mostly clustered near the meeting house near the north end of the present Main Street.

The “Indian Deed of 1672” further clarified property ownership, and the Wampunks remained in Middletown and Chatham, living on three separate reservations. (By 1785 the native Americans had sold their property and moved elsewhere.)

A Brief History of SMFSD

The Society of Middletown (Conn.) First Settlers Descendants was founded in 2000 by Gale Thomas Howe-Cornwell, a descendant of William Cornwall. In 1900 his grandfather had worked with other descendants to place a large rock now known as the Founder’s Rock in St. John’s Park next to Middletown’s Riverside cemetery. On the rock they installed a plaque honoring the first settlers there, and a plaque naming the Indian landowners who sold them their land. It was the hope of these descendants that a ceremony would be repeated in 2000 that recognized those first settlers.

Gale Cornwall decided that something should be done to honor that wish, so in 1996 he began to locate and contact any descendants of these settlers he could find, with the hope of forming a new society that would honor the pioneer families of Middletown.

After four years of work on the project, he had enrolled over 200 people by the time of the first formal meeting on Oct. 29, 2000, at which there were 58 members in attendance. At that time membership was opened to include descendants of any who settled there by the year 1700 and in the area around Middletown now known as Cromwell and Portland. Officers were elected and bylaws voted upon.

The city of Middletown graciously welcomed the descendants of the early settlers. The mayor presented a proclamation now displayed at the Godfrey Library. The Godfrey library offered to house the archives of the society, and therefore became its official headquarters. Four plaques were mounted on the library wall commemorating the 350th anniversary of the founding of the Puritan settlement, Mattabesec, now known as Middletown, and honoring the 23 men and 22 women who first settled there in 1650-1654.

In 2001 the society participated in Middletown’s 350th Anniversary festivities and parade. Since that time the society has met in Middletown every three years for organizational business, genealogy research, museum visits, member networking, and social gatherings.

Membership benefits...

When you join the Society of Middletown First Settlers Descendants, you will receive:

- Two issues per year of The Middler, the SMFSD newsletter full of information useful for research about Middletown’s first settler families and local history.
- The annual membership roster enabling you to network with Middletown “cousins” across the country who are interested in Middletown genealogy research.
- The opportunity to attend SMFSD meetings (every three years) in Middletown that include genealogy research, cemetery tours, library/museum visits, member networking, and social events.
- The opportunity to participate in the organization, suggest/plan meeting activities, and vote on SMFSD business.

Membership is a simple 1-2-3 procedure...

If you are a descendant of anyone on the above list, and would like to join SMFSD, here is the simple 1-2-3 procedure:

1. Send an outline/worksheet of your lineage to the Registrar. The applicant shall do their own genealogical research, and the resulting lineage should be accompanied by copies of reference material by generation. The Society seeks to verify submitted information, but does not research family lines.

2. Send a check payable to the Society of Middletown First Settlers Descendants [1650-1700]) for the non-refundable $10.00 application handling fee.

3. The application is then reviewed by the Society for approval. Documentation needed is furnished only through the line of descent from the 1650-1700 founder. If needed, guidelines will be sent that help document descent by generation. (The Society will retain an application if more documentation is needed. It is the applicant’s responsibility to do any additional research, and to complete any gaps in the records.) When approved, the new member can choose to pay annual or lifetime dues:

(A) Annual dues from November 1 to October 31 are $15.00 (in addition to the initial $10.00 handling fee).

(B) A new member may elect to pay lifetime dues (instead of annual dues) based on age: Age 0-50, $300; Age 51-70, $200; Age 70+, $100.

Please send membership inquiries and/or lineage information to: Donald H. Brock, Registrar, Society of Middletown First Settlers Descendants, 10 Windy Hill Road, Glen Arm, MD 21057.

nity and answered the call. The result is before you – the Fall 2005 Middler.
As I have expressed to some of you via e-mail, my aim is not only to bring to you enriching content, but also to carry on in Barbara’s lively spirit. After all, for the years between meetings, the newsletter is our bond.

I know many of you from attending SMFSD meetings in Middletown in 2001 and 2003. Some background: I am a longtime publication designer/editor who took time out for a 25-year career as a performing artist. Working on a fourth career, I am in a graduate program in Museum Studies.

I began genealogy research in the 1970s and made huge progress at the Godfrey Library. Later in the 1990s I found the extent of my entanglement in a web of Middletown ancestors: 8 of the first 23 families, and 10 more pre-1700 families.

In future issues I plan to include member news, member articles, in-depth features, first-settler profiles, and some special graphics worth saving. As you will see in the member survey on page 8, I’m eager to know your ideas. If you’ve got ideas for The Middler, please don’t hold back! I’d be happy to hear from you.

See you in Middletown.

many in the Middletown area who are eligible to join, but have not. So we need a better presence there. One way to achieve that is to have a large group come for the meetings in Middletown. The parades are over so we can’t march in front of the town again. So if you have ideas on that subject, please pass them to us.

I have been blessed to work with such a great group of willing volunteer officers. Please join me in thanking them for their efforts on the behalf of the Society. The nominating committee is active and should be searching. Please give them a positive response if they contact you. There may be some of you who would really like to serve in an office. We have no way of knowing unless you tell us yourself. I encouraged you to do just that.
