The May 12th program will be presented by Tony

Mennillo, Arturo Studios, and will be held at the Heritage Museum. Mr. Mennillo's recent book, Salty Memories Along the Coastal Highway, contains historical stories of Destin and the Emerald Coast and features 492 vintage photographs. The book, which showcases the photos of Tony's father Arturo, brings us back to a simpler time when we were captains of our own destiny, a time before highways and condos, a time when the fisherman rather than the tourist was king.

GSOC Meeting Minutes April 14, 2012

The Genealogical Society of Okaloosa County met for a regular monthly meeting at the Heritage Museum in Valparaiso, Florida on Saturday, 14 April 2012.

The meeting was called to order at 10:00 AM by President, Donna Elliott. A welcome was given to the membership along with five guests. The minutes of the March meeting were approved. A motion to approve was made by Bob Basch with a second by Ken Elliott.

Mrs. Elliott announced that each Wednesday morning a history class is held at the Valparaiso Library with David Weatherford as instructor. The Public is invited to attend.

Ken Elliott, Vice-President, responsible for securing programs for each monthly meeting reported that programs have been scheduled for most of the months through this year. The program for May will be "More Destin History" with the author, Tony Mennillo as the speaker.

Members were asked to assist the Society at "Saturday In The Park" for the 21st April at the park across the street from the Heritage Museum. The Society will have brochures and information to distribute to visitors in the park.

Membership Chairman, Sue Basch, gave a report on the number of memberships in the Society and an update of life members and dues paying members.

Treasurer, Bob Basch reported on the finances of the Society and passed the "Blue Box" to collect donations for the purpose of purchasing books for the local libraries.

Newsletter Editor, Jim Young reported he had transcribed the recently available 1940 census for Valparaiso and New Valparaiso and will print the list in the next issue of the Newsletter. He noted that a long time member of the Society, Mr. Walter Ruckel, Jr., was on the list as a teenager in the home of his father, Charles Ruckel. Mr. Ruckel was in attendance for this meeting also.

Pat Pruitt, Publicity Chairman was absent and Mrs. Elliott reported on publicity in the local newspaper to remind the public of the monthly meeting.

It was announced that Margaret Harris, a member of the Society and a registered genealogist is available for assistance in researching genealogy for the membership; however, due to the illness of Mr. Harris, Margaret is unable to attend the Society meetings at this time.

It was announced of the upcoming Federation of Genealogical Societies Conference to be held in Birmingham this summer. This Conference is held annually and this is the nearest to our area it has been in several years. Anyone interested in attending, 29 August - 1 September can view a brochure available or go on line to http://www.fgs.org/2012conference/index.php Hilma Jenus reported she had placed all genealogical society publications received by the GSOC in the Library at Fort Walton Beach.

Following the business session, Ken Elliott, Program Chairman announced that the program for the day would be a "Show and Tell" by the membership. He invited anyone who had brought something to show to come forward. Nine members and three guests presented their items and gave a short explanation of each item.

The meeting was adjourned at 11:55 AM.

John Tyler's Long Lineage

John Tyler, president of the United States from 1841 to 1845, served as the nation's chief executive after the death of William Henry Harrison. An interesting fact recently reported by Fox News is that two of John Tyler's grandchildren are still alive.

President Tyler's son Lyon Tyler, one of 15 children, was born when President Tyler was 63. Lyon Tyler had a son Lyon Tyler, Jr.,born in 1924, and another son Harrison Tyler, born in 1928. Lyon Tyler was in his 70s when these sons were born. Both Lyon, Jr., and Harrison are still living, 167 years after their grandfather left office.

When I Die

by Katie Merritt, Niceville, Florida

When I die, put my family tree book in my casket. I want to take it with me. When I find Grandmother Rebecca Tunnell White, I will ask her who her parents were and was she born in Green County, Tennessee or Sullivan County, Missouri, and why did she die so young and leave three small boys and a baby girl? What year? I know she was in the 1880 census in Kansas but Grandpa White was a widower in the 1885 state census.

And now for my great great grandfather: Were you the Stacy Reeves who married Sarah Dicks, or were you the Stacy Reeves who married Sarah Lawrence; the parents of my great grandmother Mariah Reeves Snider. Her death certificate stated her father was Stacy Reeves and her mother was Sarah. Now how am I supposed to know? You both were married in Mason County, Kentucky and both moved to Putnam County, Indiana in 1833 and both died there. Okay, which one?

Now for great great grandfather Andrew Garret Wendt. How come you deserted from Denmark and Napoleon's army dressed like a woman and sneaked aboard a boat for America? Why did you change your name from Banquin to Wendt when you got here? Was it easier to spell or were you hiding from something? How come your sons were both deserters from the Civil War? Like father like sons? How come?

And now for Dutton Lane II -- what was your wife's maiden name? Mary is all I have. Where were you married? In Maryland or Pennsylvania? You are one of my many mysteries in the long line of Lanes. Did your father, Samuel, stay in Maryland or did he come to Tennessee with you and your brothers. Also did you marry Nancy Thompson in Green County or was that your son, Dutton, Jr. He married twice.

So many questions unanswered. So many years of searching. Will they all be answered when I cross over? I'll come back and let you know.

WILLIAM RUFUS BURRIS 1842-1935 CONFEDERATE VETERAN OF THE CIVIL WAR

by Malcolm Flanagan

William Rufus Burris left York County, South Carolina, in a covered wagon at the age of six with his family and, after stopping for one season in Alabama to make a crop, settled in a rural area of Marshall County, Mississippi, near Holly Springs.

Map of Marshall County, Mississippi in the 1800s

During the Civil War Ruf (as he was known to family and friends) enlisted at least three times, the first for the Sixty Day Brigade. According to written reports from his son, he enlisted to fight for his rights. Among those rights, perhaps he as the oldest son was in line to inherit eight to ten slaves. After the first enlistment was over he returned home, realizing: "We were pretty simple-minded to think that we could win the war in 60 days". He later told of sleeping on the cold ground so close to his fellow soldiers that when one wanted to turn over he would call out: "spoon left" or "spoon right" and all would turn together. They often woke up to find they were covered in snow.

After spending a few days to visit with family and sweetheart, Ruf, re-enlisted on March 4, 1862, in Company D of the 375th Mississippi Infantry, later to be known as the 34th Mississippi Infantry. While in this company he contracted typhoid fever and was given a discharge on July 15th (no year recorded but likely 1862). After a period of recuperation he enlisted again. By this time he was engaged to his sweetheart even though his father tried to discourage the engagement, telling the fiancée that Ruf could return severely wounded and that would be unfair to her. She supposedly replied that: "I would marry him if he came back missing both arms and both legs". However, by the time Ruf returned home she had married someone else and died. Near the end of his life he would tell his daughter-in-law that "I still love her and will if I live another hundred years".

Before his third enlistment he discussed with his father the possibility of joining the Quantrill Raiders, an independent group who took orders from no one and also took no prisoners. From this group would later come the James Gang. He instead enlisted with Company B of the 3rd Mississippi Calvary, 11th Division, under officers named Chalmers and McGirk. Ruf called himself a scout between the lines and often hid at night in the homes of friendly families. His squad once took captive a group of Federal soldiers. The Federal officer had a fine, fat black horse with a new saddle. My grandfather took this horse, turned his own loose, and started to camp. Before reaching camp they were surrounded by federal soldiers and decided to make a run for it. He was winning the race at first, but too soon his fine horse gave out. Ironically, his old horse ran past him with the stirrups standing straight back! He would later lament: "What I would have given to have been in that saddle..." Ruf sat on his horse with his hands in the air while his pursuer emptied his pistol at him. After missing with all six shots, however, the would-be captor became the captive and they went back the way they had Ruf was captured for good, however, on July 19, 1863, near Germantown, Tennessee. He was shipped first to St. Louis, Missouri, then to Camp Morton, Indiana, and finally to Fort Delaware. Here he stayed for the duration of the war. While in military prison he was quartered with, among others, a Captain Fontaine who later told of physical and verbal abuse but my grandfather never told of any abuse while he was there. However, he was a private, not Captain Fontaine. He said he had friends among the guards.

HARPER'S WEEKLY

Arrival of 2000 Confederate Prisoners at Fort Delaware

Food consisted of a fourth of a loaf of bread and a piece of fat meat about two inches square, twice a day. (He never seemed to tire of the fatback, as he would eat the fatback that was used to season the vegetables throughout his life. He survived two consecutive bouts of pneumonia and a heart attack in his 80's). He told of their prison housekeeping chores and how they passed the time wrestling, foot-racing, gambling, story-telling and fighting. Whenever a new man arrived the first questions were about news from home and the next were whether the man could run, wrestle, etc. Grandpa was a proficient a wrestler. His son, my uncle, reported that when he was 13 or 14 he offered to take his dad on. Before he knew what was happening the son was on his back in spite of the fact that the dad was well past 80. Grandpa was five feet and ten inches tall and never weighed over 150 pounds.

While in prison with plenty of time to kill, my grandfather and his childhood friend, Jim Bonds, wrote a letter to President Lincoln stating that they were country boys who would like to get out of prison. Some weeks later they were called to the camp commander's office who told them he would release them if they would take an oath of allegiance to the United States. Their response was: "We have already taken an oath of allegiance to the Confederate States of American and we are men too small to support two countries at the same time". Consequently, they were returned to their quarters where they remained until the end of the war. However, Grandpa would eventually take his oath of allegiance to the United States at Fort Delaware on July 11, 1865. My mother told the story that earlier a wealthy woman who visited the prison had offered to send Grandpa to one of the best universities if he would take the oath, but he declined.

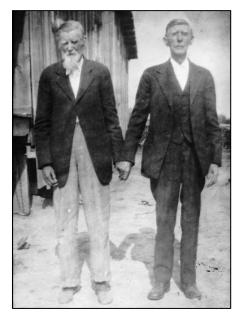

William Rufus (Ruf) Burris and second wife Myrtilla Elizabeth Rankin, perhaps on their wedding day.

After 23 months of captivity he returned home to a bleak and discouraging future of hardship and political persecution. My uncle stated that Grandpa never admitted the Confederate Army was defeated. On numerous occasions he stated: "When they came two to our one, we whipped them every time, but when they came three, four, and five to our one, they just overpowered us." He agreed, however, that it was best that the nation remained intact and that slavery was wrong.

Even so, he remained faithful to the Confederacy and attended Confederate conventions when he could.

Ruf married his first wife, Harriet Newell Combs, on January 3, 1867, and lived with her for 40 years before she died on October 20, 1907. They had no children. He took his second wife, Myrtilla Elizabeth Euphrasia Rankin Porter on December 5, 1909. He was 67 and she was 34. Their first child was born March 11, 1911, when he was 69 and they named him Waitus Rankin Burris in honor of Ruf's only brother to have lived to adulthood. Hattie Eugenia Burris, my mother, followed on March 31, 1913. Grandpa lived until 17 May 1935 (age 92 years and 6 months) to see both children married and to know that I was on the way.

William Rufus Burris and his brother Waitus V. Burris

My uncle wrote that his father was honest to the core and expected everyone else to be honest. He taught his children morality and Godliness by both precept and example. He was a popular storyteller and young people were attracted to him and his stories. They were amused by his jokes. He was considered a good old-time fiddler, playing and singing popular songs of the day, the war, and hymns. His son and stepson had a new suit tailored for him and he chose a powered blue which he called Confederate grey. Each Sunday he donned his suit and inspected himself in the mirror. Although he did not have much formal schooling he subscribed to the daily Memphis, Tennessee, Commercial Appeal and read music well. In his later years he sang a lot including Confederate war songs often on the porch at night or even in bed. He was buried in his Confederate grey suit. The family has perpetuated the W. R. Burris line, now to the fifth generation.

PUTTING YOUR ANCESTOR'S LIFE ON A TIMELINE

by ESTHER ELEY JONES

My fourth great-grandfather, BENJAMIN HODGE, was born in South Carolina in 1752. He died 28 January 1837 in Richland County, South Carolina. What happened between those two dates is the real life story of BENJAMIN HODGE. In my search to fill in the blanks on my family tree, I sometimes forget that the final sum of a life is much more than when a person was born and died. It is the life story of all those events in a life. In order to see a snapshot of those events, I created a research time line of BENJAMIN HODGE. The research timeline is an effective research tool to organize all information acquired from an ancestor's documents, census listings, wills, pensions, historical events, and any important events of an ancestor's life. The research timeline highlights the major events in an ancestor's life, as well as, the smallest events. The research timeline gives you a picture of your ancestor's life. It serves to help organize an ancestor's life in chronological order, down to the smallest detail from birth and ending with death. All of those events make up BENJAMIN HODGE's life story. The purpose of my timeline for BENJAMIN HODGE was to analyze the information to see where I was in my research of his life story and to see if there were gaps, overlapping events, or conflicting data in my research.

Few ancestors left daily journals or records of their activities and the events with which they were associated. Yet we try to reconstruct their lives as accurately as possible with reliable sources and historical events of the time. The use of the timeline will usually display events surrounding an ancestor's life in his time and geographic area. It will provide a detailed summary of a person's life in the context of life's everyday events.

BENJAMIN HODGE's daughter, LIDIA, married JORDAN LEE, my third great grandfather. JORDAN was born in Richland County, South Carolina in 1780. Timelines help the researchers understand how two families merged into one and how they came to be in the same place. The timeline can help prove or disprove family stories, identify migration patterns, and help understand how major and minor historical events influenced our ancestors' lives.

Family historians are accustomed to using charts and forms to organize their research. Pedigree charts, family group sheets, and descendant charts are standard tools of a genealogist. Most of us are familiar with those tools; however, timelines are vital tools in helping genealogists see gaps in events of an ancestor's life, overlapping events, or conflicting data. When creating your timeline, you will add important dates from your ancestors' lives, along with historic events such as wars, natural disasters, and epidemics. Look for local events of importance to add to your time1ine. You will add personal information such as children's names, birth dates, marriages and names of their spouses, deaths if any preceded your ancestor. Include census listings, when and where your ancestor witnessed legal documents, bought land, and any pension information. A timeline can show you, at a glance, which major event may have influenced your ancestors' life or reason for their life choices.

When genealogists have researched all these obvious sources for information, such as vital records, census records, land records, wills, pensions, national and state archives, creating a timeline can be a valuable tool. Analysis of the research data in the timeline of my ancestor BENJAMIN HODGE helped me identify gaps in my research and conflicting data. The analysis also led to questions, creative thinking, and gave me hints for further research into the life of BENJAMIN HODGE.

By placing your family records against a backdrop of a life event and world events in a timeline, you can tell amazing family stories in a powerful visual way. Once you have finished using your timeline for research, you have a handy tool available for writing a narrative or biography. Make sure your notes are short and clearly written or stated. The research timeline makes it easy for organizing your ancestors' information into life stories and incorporating the historical events for a more creative, and interesting narrative rather than just a reconstruction of dry facts.

The next GSOC meeting will be on May 12, 2012, at the Heritage Museum of Northwest Florida at 10 A.M.

The program will be presented by Tony Mennillo, Arturo Studios. Mr. Mennillo's recent book, Salty Memories Along the Coastal Highway, contains historical stories of Destin and the Emerald Coast and features 492 vintage photographs made by his father Arturo. These bring us back to a simpler time when we were captains of our own destiny, a time before highways and condos, a time when the fisherman rather than the tourist was king.
