President's Musings

By David Putnam

Hello Dear Friends, I hope you all had an enjoyable Holiday Season! Here in New England we experienced unusually balmy weather throughout Christmas week. However, as New Year approaches we have seen our first significant snowfall with cold and icy conditions. Old man winter has reminded us that he is still in charge. As the old Yankees used to say, "As the days lengthen, the cold strengthens."

I regret to inform all of you of the death of long time member Leslie Thompson of Rhode Island. Les' wife Portia wrote to me to say that Les passed away on 5 September 2015. Les was descended from several Waldoboro families and attended several of our annual meetings over the years. On behalf of the entire OBBFHA I expressed our condolences to Portia.

Mrs. Jean Lawrence, Waldoboro's Unofficial Ambassador To The World, has once again been instrumental in bringing in a new member. Ms. Jane Ordway Carman of California visited Waldoboro last fall and Jean was able to direct her to some local sites and provide some background information. Ms. Carman is a descendant of the Welt, Benner, Cushman and Nash Families. She sent in her membership application and I was able to provide her with some information about the Welt Family of Waldoboro. She was very pleased and excited to receive the information and to become a member. This is not the first time Jean Lawrence has recruited a new member and I want to thank her for her efforts. Jean is the President of the Waldoboro Historical Society, as well as a member of our Board of Directors, and she is always alerting interested people to the existence of our group.

I would also like to welcome some other new members to our group: Ms. Carol Thompson of North Carolina (descendant of the Creamer Family), Ms. Kathleen McCracken of Virginia (descendant of Andreas Suchfort, Johannes Newbert, Johann Wilhelm Muller), and Mr. Kenneth Winchenbach of Maine (descendant of the Winchenbach Family). Please contact me if you have any questions about our group or a research matter. Welcome to you all, I think you will enjoy our group and we hope to meet all of you at one of our annual meetings!

I am continually amazed at the amount of genealogical material that is uploaded onto various internet sites. Today I read on the Vita Brevis blog, put out by the New England Historic Genealogical Society, about a new website sponsored by the Maine Registers of Deeds Association, The Official Land Records Website, maineregistryofdeeds.com. This website will eventually offer copies of all land transactions from the 18

County Registries of Maine from colonial time to the present. There is a separate search engine for each county and some counties have not uploaded all their information as of yet. This is a site to monitor as more information is uploaded!

http://vita-brevis.org/2015/12/maine-deeds-online-rich-resource/?utm_source=twgnewsletter&utm_medium=newsletter&utm_campaign=twg773

Another new website that is a treasure trove of information is Newspapers.com. I came across this website while doing research on another project and it is an invaluable tool for genealogical research. The site is uploading more newspapers all the time and currently features over 3,700 newspapers from around the world. I was able to find the engagement announcements, with pictures, for my wife's grandparents. Naturally, I looked to see what Maine newspapers are featured on the site. The only Maine newspapers from the 19th century currently featured are the Bangor Daily Whig and Courier, 1832 through 1900, and the Bangor Whig Courier, 1893-1894. (There are other Maine newspapers featured on the site, but they are from the 20th century after 1949.) I entered the words "Maine" and "Waldoboro" into the search engine for the Bangor Whig and Courier and came across 1486 matches spanning the years 1832 through 1900. Some merely the mention of the Town of Waldoboro or identify someone as being from the town. However, I also got a few surprises as I read the various articles about life in Waldoboro during the 1800's. I will share a few articles with you. I will use initials for the last names of the people involved in some of the more infamous or tragic stories. As they say in the old movies, "there are eight million stories in the naked city," here are eight of them.

27 April 1857: "On the 19th of March Mr. Charles Havener of Waldoboro died aged 97. He was a revolutionary soldier, and was engaged in the battles of Stillwater, Monmouth and Trenton. He also witnessed the surrender of Burgoyne."

8 November 1869: "The Bath Times records the following queer divorce case. Elizabeth M., libellant v. Henry M. The above named parties live in Waldoboro, and are upwards of 70 years of age. They have lived together for 47 years, and are the parents of 24 children. Cause is cruelty and desertion."

21 August 1879: "CAPTURED! Alexander S., who escaped from the State Prison, has been recaptured in Gorchen woods, Waldoboro, about eight miles west of Thomaston. He was captured by Daniel Hoffses and Louis Mank, who had been searching for him. He had changed his prison suit for citizen's clothes, which had been furnished him by parties in Cushing. He was taken back to prison, and will not be given an opportunity to affect another escape."

2 November 1886: "Lincoln County. Mrs. Josiah Sidelinger, of North Waldoboro, who lost an only son, but fifteen years of age when he enlisted in the army, has received a pension and arrearages to the amount of over $2000."

Another fine specimen of Waldoboro marine architecture was launched, Thursday, from the yard of George L. Welt & Co. This vessel was a four-masted schooner, the first of this rig built in Waldoboro. She is named the Isiah Hart, for one of her owners. Her dimensions are as follows: length of keel 171 feet, 3 inches; breadth of beam 35 feet, 6 inches; depth of hold 20 feet.

15 August 1888: Sunday afternoon, Dr. S. C. Gordon of Portland, assisted by Drs. Sanborn, Eveleth and Alden of Waldoboro, and Parsons of Damariscotta, removed a tumor from Mrs. Cyrus Welt of Waldoboro, who has been a sufferer for several years. The tumor weighed sixty-eight pounds. The operation was successful and the patient is doing well as could be expected.

14 June 1893: "FIRE IN WALDOBORO. TEN BUILDINGS BURNED-LOSS $50,000 to $75,000. Waldoboro, June 13. A disastrous fire raged in this village last night, breaking out about 8 o'clock and continuing till past midnight. Everything was swept clean, from the Medomak House to the John Sides place, including Willitts furniture warehouse and Glidden & Achorn's building. Ten buildings in all were burned, including the hotel, houses and stores. The section burned is on cross streets back of the main thoroughfare. The Tibbetts & Fish block, the largest in town, was not damaged. "

18 November 1896: MURDER TRIAL-THE PROSECUTION RESTS AND THE DEFENSE OPENS. (third paragraph) “Herman B. Welt, the boy who first found Moore, testified that he went to bed that night about 8 or 9 o’clock. Next morning went to build a fire in the kitchen, emptied the ashes in the rear of the hotel and found Moore’s body. Called Rogers and Brackett and went for a doctor. “

I found this last story intriguing because Herman Welt was my great grandfather! I have heard many stories about his life, but never anything about him testifying in a murder trial. I was also struck that he was living and working at the Exchange Hotel in Waldoboro in September of 1891 when he found the body of a murder victim. He was only 17 years of age at the time and had many family members living in town. Why was he living in a hotel? He moved to Lynn, MA sometime within the next few years. It is quite remarkable what you can find out about your family just by scanning the old newspapers.

QUERIES

We received the following queries on our facebook page. Please respond if you have any information for these ladies.

Marilyn Sawyer: Does anyone have information on brothers Peter and George Light who owned a schooner around the time of the Revolution? I believe they were loyalist. Thank you.

Judith Trowbridge Schlicker: I have discovered that I am descended from three families of the Old Broad Bay area; Volger, Hein, Sietz and possibly Gabriel. The first three families moved to Stokes NC. Does anyone know why they moved to NC? Did it have something to do with the Moravian faith? The daughter married a Davis and moved to Washington County IN.

Responses can be sent to the OBBFHA Facebook page <https://www.facebook.com/waldoboromaineancestors> or forward to me at dputnam925@msn.com.

The OBBFHA received this nice thank you from Adam Seiders 12/7/15:

My sister and I made it out to the Meeting House Cove Church and Cemetery this weekend and loved what we found. I appreciate all who have helped preserve this site and continue to make an effort. Most of our family lives in Texas now and have since Edward Seiders made his journey down from Maine.

*Thank you,
Adam Seiders*

New Series, vol. 10, no. 4, Fall 2013

OBBFHA has proudly taken on the project of clearing and restoring the site of the Meeting House Cove church and cemetery (c. 1762) on the Dutch Neck Road in Waldoboro. This area was the home of the second Lutheran German Protestant Church prior to the German church which stands today. The church was a log cabin with an adjoining cemetery. It is unknown how many graves are there and most stones have either fallen to the ground or were taken many years ago. The two stones of Cornelius Seiders & Elizabeth Leissner Seiders remain, but are in bad shape. We are in the process of getting those repaired and up-righted. Work will continue in the spring and summer with erecting a sign on the site and searching for more stones. Please respect the fact the cemetery is on private property. Photos will be posted on the OBBFHA website in the near future.

Our German Holidays by Ralf Lorenzen

It's nice to reflect on the traditions that make (the December) holidays special to our family. These special events help focus our attention on meaning of the days and show caring and love for one another. A thoughtful conversation, warm smile, gentle touch, a nice fire, and the smell of someone peeling a tangerine are what I remember most.

Nikolaus – December 6th was a special day. Nikolaus was coming! All the children would polish their shoes and place them at the foot of their bed. If you had been good the past year, a treat was what you could expect. But, if you had been naughty, a RUTE (switch) would await you in the morning. Anxious children would usually find nuts, candy, a tangerine, chocolate, or a small toy stuffed into their little shoes. It paid to be good!

Advents Kranz – Four Sundays prior to Christmas, we would get out our Advents Kranz. This was a wooden, circular candle holder that we decorated with pine branches in the form of a wreath. Four large red candles were placed in the holder. On each Sunday before Christmas, and beginning four Sundays before, a new candle would be lit along with the previously lit candles. With all the lights out, the flicker of the candles and soft Christmas music would help direct our thoughts to the love we shared with the ones around us, just as Jesus loves us.

Egg nog, soft cookies, tangerines and nuts made the nights special. The best nuts, however, were the filberts. We would crack these nuts one after another, looking for a vielibchen. This took place when two whole nuts, not broken, were in the same shell. These “lovers” were good luck. You would now find someone special to lock little fingers with, and as each person put one of the nuts in his mouth, say “vielibchen.” The contest was then, the next day, to see who would remind the other first by saying, “vielibchen” once again.

Finally, Christmas Eve arrived. The tree, which had just recently been put up, looked beautiful. As darkness arrived, all the children had to go to their rooms. We did some last minute rehearsal of the song or gedicht (poem) we all would recite prior to opening any presents. We were excited. We couldn't wait. Then we heard it! The bells rang as Santa left, leaving behind all our presents. This was our cue to come out of our rooms and hurry to the living room. Our eyes were as wide as they could be as we gazed at the many presents. All the children would recite “Oh Tannenbaum” together and then wish our parents a Merry Christmas. The actual opening of the presents didn't take long. Even though it was the culmination of all the activities of the past month, it's the traditional celebration with a loving family that I remember.

(The above memoir appeared in the 1996 Volume 5, No. 1 edition of Old Broad Bay Bund & Blatt: a newsletter about the German Colony of Broad Bay Maine established in 1742-1753, an early publication of the Old Broad Bay Family History Association, edited by W. Whitaker and G. Horlacher. It is now out of print. The copy is from the files of the Waldoborough Historical Society.

Why MOCA?

by Cheryl Willis Patten, member of the MOCA Workshop Committee

Eww—there's a skeleton carved on the top of that gravestone. Whoever would want that?

That's just one of the areas of interest addressed by the Maine Old Cemetery Association (MOCA). Some of those belonging to MOCA study the intricate artwork that can be found on gravestones, the symbolism associated with it, and the lives of the carvers who made the markers. Some of MOCA's members are interested in finding and preserving cultural and historical information that might be found on a gravestone, and nowhere else. Some are interested for genealogical reasons, some for reasons related to preserving the stones of veterans and giving them the respect they deserve. Some study the epitaphs and others are interested in cemeteries for the green space they offer. If you ask twenty-five of the six hundred fifty plus members of MOCA why they belong, you'll likely get twenty-five different answers.

I'm pleased to let you know that in August 2016 I'll be at your annual meeting and will be able to give you a brief overview of some of MOCA's goals/projects over the years, with one part of my presentation involving sharing with you recent activities of the MOCA Workshop Committee. As a member of the Old Broad Bay Family History Association you are showing that you have an interest in the past. Perhaps you'd like to learn more about how to safely clean the valuable cultural artifacts that mark the final resting places of your ancestors and/or how to safely preserve their markers. I look forward to meeting with you in August 2016 and introducing you to MOCA and to things you can do to preserve the stones that mark your ancestor's graves.

In case you need any MOCA related bio, Cheryl Willis Patten, member of MOCA's Workshop Committee. 2016 Secretary, Past President, Past V-P, Past Membership Secretary

I've only been involved with MOCA since 1996 but interested in cemeteries for many years prior to that. Let me know if you need anything else. www.moca-me.org

Tip: Safely caring for old gravestones requires the use of correct materials and methods. Use a soft bristle brush and always clean from the bottom up.

The preceding is taken from the journal Lewis Shepard wrote for his son John Frederic Shepard. Lewis Frederic Shepard (pictured) was the fifth child born to Ann Barbara Hahn and John Shepard. The journal in my possession now, was copied by NEHGS of Boston several years ago with permission from my mother Dorothy Cunningham. I have since given Belfast Free Library, Special Collections a copy.

It is presented here in a little different format, but I have not added or taken away from the information. I have not verified all of the information only to clarify the spelling of a name or to specifically verify names and dates in my line. I have found some of this information in Broad Bay Pioneers by Wilford W. Whitaker and Gary T. Horlacher. Some names and dates are the same and some are different. This is not meant to be a source. It is just another part of Lewis's journal. Lewis must have had great pride in his heritage to attempt to do this. It is with great pride that I share it with you now.

Of all my lines I find this one of the greatest interest. Growing up in a small New England town, I did not know I had a German line. My great grandmother, Abbie Eliza Shepard, for whatever reason did not talk about it. Abbie Eliza was one of eight children of John Frederick and Elizabeth Ann Knight Shepard.
