Last June he left his former place of residence with a part of his family and made arrangements to move the remainder next spring. Four days previous to the time set to commence his journey east in attempting to stop a pair of horses running with a loaded wagon, he received a fatal injury. The horses & wagon passed over him and in a moment he was rendered helpless and totally insensible from his shoulder to his extremities. In short, he had feeling only in his head, neck and upper part of his shoulders and yet was blessed with reason. He was injured on the 22 nd of Sept. and died Oct. 4 th	11/30/1842
