Page 2:4 - THE LAST OF BRADDOCK'S MEN - The Lancaster, Ohio Gazette announces the death at that place on the 4th inst. of Samuel JENKINS, a colored man, age 115 years. He was born a slave, property of Broadwater, in Fairfax County, Virginia in 1734. He drove his masters provision wagon over the Allegany Mountains in the memorable campaign of Gen. BRADDOCK and remained in service at the Big Meadows until its close. He was held as a slave until about 40 years ago when upon the death of the master he was purchased by a gentleman who brought him to the State of Ohio and thus released him from bondage. Soon after his liberation, he settled in Lancaster, where he continued to reside until his death. Although his bodily frame had given way, he retained his mental faculties until the last. It was thought that he was the last man living, either white or colored, who served in BRADDOCK'S Expedition in 1755 against the
