Page 2:2 - DROWNED - On the 18th inst Mr. KERRIGAN and his brother-in-law J. HAVEY were employed by Mr. CEWITT, bringing sand in a scow cross from the dike, below Messrs. ROY & Co's factory in the first ward; and it appears that KERRIGAN's setting pole was either carried down by the current, or the water was deeper than he anticipated, when by pressing down the pole he pitched overboard head foremost. He however, came up with the pole, and HAVEY had a pole in his hand. Yet so entirely were they both paralyzed by fear, that KERRIGAN, after coming up a second time, sunk to rise no more; and no alarm was given to CEWITT and others that work on the bank at a distance of ten or fifteen rods, until too late. A shad net was procured and in about half an hour the body was recovered. Coroner HASTINGS summoned a jury, which jury rendered a verdict in accordance with the above facts.

Mr. HAVEY stated that KERRIGAN, his wife and himself embarked at Liverpool for this country, where they had cash and clothes to the amount of £36 stolen from them and that they then left his sister, KERRIGAN's wife, to stay til they could send for her. K. was about 29 years old - left no children - had been in this country about two months - and is represented as an industrious and steady man by those who had employed him.

- SUDDEN DEATH - Alexander ROACH was engaged at work as a carpenter for Mr. F.A. IRELAND, on the Shaker Road, about two miles from West Troy, on the 22d inst. He several times complained of the intense heat and was allowed to rest three hours during the middle of the day. He drank considerable cold water. About 4 o'clock he sat down on a stick of timber, and immediately slipped off, resting his head against the stick. He was spoken to, but made no reply. He was then carried under a shade and spirits of camphor offered him, but he was unable to swallow. The family paid every attention in their power; but after remaining about three quarters of an hour in an unconscious state, he breathed his last. The jury was called by Coroner HASTINGS, which said he came to his death in consequence of drinking cold water while exposed to the intense heat of the sun on the 22d of June.
