of four ITALIANS namely Joseph VARNEY, Dominico PEIRO, Jullien ALLOYSE and Tomaso VARNEY were coming up Hill Street in the lower part of that City, when some offensive remarks were addressed to them by a party of young men and boys congregated in that locality which so exasperated the ITALIANS that they pitched on them and a fight ensued. The man HURLBUT, before whose residence this was taking place, saw that his employer's son was in the fight, and was being pretty roughly handled by one of the ITALIANS, went out to endeavor to rescue him. In doing so, he was knocked down and stabbed with a large dirk knife, in the fleshy part of the leg. He survived but about a half an hour after receiving the wound, having bled to death before medical assistance arrived. Joseph VARNEY is said to be the person by whom the wound was inflicted. The four ITALIANS have been arrested and are now in jail.
