JULY 23, 1856

Page 2:2 - SUICIDE - A young lady about 22 years of age named Catherine HOGAN, who was recently employed as a domestic in the family of a Mr. WHEELER in Troy, committed suicide at the house of Mr. HENDEY in Albany where she was visiting. The fatal dose - arsenic - was taken on Saturday and she died early Sunday morning. The following note was found in her dress pocket, after death, "Remember me to Tim DWYER. I'm going to die for the love of a young man. His name is Joseph EAGAN. He boarded where I live - at the house of Mr. R. WHEELER, No. 19 South St., East Troy. He works at No. 14 Fulton Street. He first taught me to love him, then deceived me; and, for his sake, I will die - tell him to come and bury me. EAGAN has my ambrotype, and tell Tim DWYER to get it. He has red hair. He covers sofas and mattresses. Go to the Stage Office in Broadway, and get my trunk and hat box."

Page 2:3 - BOY DROWNED - Edward F., son of Elias ROGERS, and about seven years of age, while playing on a raft in the State Basin, just north of Skiff Ferry landing, on Wednesday last, fell from the same, and before assistance could be rendered was drowned.
