Page 2:3 - Coroner Joseph BORN, of Albany, died Friday afternoon. He had been unwell for nearly two years - Coroner B. was a native of Albany, and had always enjoyed the respect of his fellow citizens.

Page 2:3 - DEATH OF MR. WISWALL - Ebenezer WISWALL, long a resident of this vicinity, and proprietor of the ferries between this Village & Troy, died quite suddenly on Friday afternoon last. The circumstances of his death were somewhat singular. He was in the Village, about as usual, on Thursday, although suffering considerably from the extreme heat. After returning home that evening, he complained of feeling a little unwell and also on the morning of Friday, but no serious apprehensions were entertained. Upon arising from bed in the afternoon, where he had lain for a short time, one of the family in the room, noticing the unusual pallor which overspread his features, said to him, "You look extremely pale - as though you were about to faint." and to which he replied, "I don't know but I shall." These were the last words he spoke, and in a short time after breathed his last. His funeral was attended by a large concourse of citizens, at his late residence about a mile northwest of the Village on Sunday afternoon last.
