Page 2:2 - DEATH OF AN OLD PILOT - Under our obituary head today is announced the death of John HASKELL, formerly of Albany, latterly of Watervliet Centre, in the 74th year of his age. Sometime since he broke his arm and had not yet recovered from the injury. On Thursday night he went into his garden, and while there, fell and broke his leg just above the ankle. He was carried to the house when a physician arrived and proceeded to set the limb, he exclaimed, "Doctor I am going." and died almost immediately. The Albany Times says Mr. HASKELL was one of the first pilots on the Hudson
