began to pick up the corn. While he was thus engaged, the horses started, and one of the wheels passed over the unfortunate lad killing him instantly. He was living with a relative in this Village, his father residing in Rochester, and his mother being dead.

Page - SINGULAR & SUDDEN DEATH AT THE BARRACKS - A most singular and sudden death occurred at the Barracks on Wednesday evening last. The victim was a soldier named Joseph BALDWIN, a resident of Newark, N.J. It appears that he and another person were drinking together. They drank two glasses of brandy and two of bourbon whiskey. Soon after taking this he became unconscious. When some persons about the Barracks understood to awaken him he was found to be stupid, and remained so until his death. It is presumed that he was drugged by some means, which produced death. The other soldier was not affected in the least, although he drank out of the same bottle, and as often as deceased. He says the reason he escaped is probably that he ate some pigs feet.
