

JUNE 15, 1864 CONTINUED FROM PAGE 373

Less than two years since Lt. McC. entered the service as Sgt. of Battery H., but was a few months thereafter promoted to a Second Lieutenancy. Subsequently upon the formation of a new Battery, he was commissioned as First Lieutenant in which position he held at the time of his death. He was a quiet, reserved young man, a brave and skillful soldier. He leaves a wife, to whom he has been married but two short months with a widowed mother and other relatives to mourn his loss. An effort is being made to procure his body and have it brought home for interment. Should this succeed our citizens should see that the tribute of respect due the heroic dead is rendered to his remains.

Page 3:2 - Another list of killed on the battlefield which include: Edward COOPER, Charles SEEBER of Water-vliet; James CONROY Coeymans; George E. UPJOHN of West Troy; William STEELE, Charles SCHOONMAKER both of Westerlo.

JUNE 22, 1864

Page 2:4 - DIED: On the 18th inst. Dennis RYAN, age 28 years.

Page 3:2 - KILLED & WOUNDED - We learn by letter from the front that on the 8th inst. Corp. Simon P. COLE was killed and Lt. M. HAVENS and Frank MARSH of Albany were wounded. They were members of Co. H., (Capt Maguires) 7th Heavy Artillery.

On the 17th inst while yet before Petersburg, Lt. Charles YEARSLEY of this Village was killed. Lt. Y. was a brave and active young man, a son of Henry YEARSLEY Esq. He left here in August 1862 as 3d Sgt. of Company H., 7th H. Artillery, but by the proficiency in drill and soldier-like deportment soon gained promotion, and several months since was made 2d Lt. of Company L. His parents - upon whom the news of his death falls with almost crushing weight - will have the sympathy of all loyal hearts in their affliction.

JUNE 29, 1864

Page 2:2 - A MOURNFUL ITEM - Yesterday afternoon the funeral of George SAUDERS of the 7th Artillery and that of his wife Eliza Jane, took place from Dr. MAGOONS Church. The husband was wounded at Cold Harbor, and died from the effects. His body arrived here last week. About a week ago, the wife was attacked with typhoid fever, and died on Friday. Dr. MAGOON preached one of the most feeling funeral services ever listened to. Two small children, all they had, are thus thrown upon a cold world to pass through the perils of childhood and youth, without