Bay City has several vintage buildings with brick corbelling which is a style where bricks project from the wall in an artistic design. Engineering and technology must be used in the technique or the wall will crumble. Most brick corbels were used in the 1800s and 1900s. Some buildings have plaster designs on the facades. While you are looking, notice the other brick designs around the doors and windows. All of these examples are on the courthouse square.
