7:00 PM Meeting
Place: Bellevue Regional Library

Speaker: Karen Parsons, EGS member and DAR Regent

ABOUT THE PROGRAM

The February program will feature a member and DAR Regent, Karen Parsons, and her talk will be "Then and Now – Phoebe Goodell Judson." Phoebe wrote a book, Pioneer Search for an Ideal Home. She was a Washington pioneer and if people google her name, they can find excerpts of the book.

MESSAGE FROM THE BOARD

I am Maxine Klink, Nominating Committee Chairman and member of the EGS Board.

Peter Robertson was President at the time I joined EGS. I was interested in doing German Research so I joined the German Special Interest Group (SIG). Jan Pankratz, a founding member of EGS, was the chairman. Jan started this German SIG more than 17 years ago and so many of us have benefited from her outstanding leadership.

During Mickey Main's tenure as President, I was asked and agreed to serve on the Nominating Committee with Chairman Marty Gale. I also took my first trip to the Family History Library in Salt Lake City, Utah, with members of the Shore to Shore Group.

Our next President, Gene Fagerberg, introduced me to the benefits and fun of participating with exhibits at fairs, expos and conventions.

When Bill Sperber became EGS President, I became Chairman of the German Interest Group.

Our current President, Norb Ziegler, designed an EGS member survey; one item identified was an interest in Irish research. As a result of this survey, I initiated the revitalization of the Irish SIG which had been dormant for several years. It has grown to over 25 interested members.

I urge everyone to join a Special Interest Group and to volunteer to serve on one of the standing committees or perhaps even become an officer and member of the Board. EGS has always been high on my priority list and I am continuing to reap the benefits of EGS members research assistance and friendships.

JANUARY PROGRAM SUMMARY FOR JANUARY 13

Those EGS members who chose to brave the elements on Saturday afternoon, January 13th, to attend the EGS monthly meeting at the Bellevue Library were rewarded by a very educational and entertaining program on getting the most out of the U.S. census, given by Paul Huntress of the South King County Genealogical Society. Paul retired from Boeing three years ago and has put his computer background to good use in developing genealogical research strategies for the U.S. census.

Paul's presentation was divided into three parts: the history of the census, how to find people in the census, and lastly how to use the information contained in the census. He began by giving an overview of the history and methods used to conduct the census from its inception in 1790 up to present time. Paul emphasized that this background is especially important if one is trying to extract as much information as possible from the census data that are available.

U.S. censuses conducted before 1850 are especially challenging as they only list head of households by name and all members of the family are enumerated in age and gender categories, not by name and age as they were from 1850 onward. One of the factors to consider is that each of the early censuses (1790-1840) was carried out in, at best, a 3 mile per hour world. Thus the enumeration process took 9 to 18 months starting with the official census date.

If the enumerators assiduously followed the census instructions then the enumeration listed only those family members living on the nominal census day, e.g. it should include any family member who had died between this date and the actual date that the family was enumerated; while excluding any child who was born subsequent to the nominal census day but before the family was actually enumerated. Paul suggested that his work with the early censuses indicated that many respondents gave their information as of the date they were enumerated rather than of the official date of the census.

Inferring dates of death from census data is even more difficult unless the person that one is searching for died between 1850 and 1880 and serendipitously passed on within the year prior to the census date. In which case, an examination of the Mortality Schedules may provide some useful information.

As Paul pointed out, the information provided in the census has progressively increased. Certain types of occupational data along with the number of aliens residing in the household were reported in 1820. Starting with the 1830 census the number of persons with various disabilities are listed, such as blind, deaf and dumb. Often overlooked is the information on revolutionary war pensioners and their ages given in the 1840 census (unfortunately they are not listed by name!). Also included in the 1840 census for the first time was the number of persons attending school.

The 1850 census, which is generally regarded as the first "modern" census, was greatly expanded to include a listing of all persons in the household by name, age, gender, color, occupation, value of real estate owned, state or country of birth, married with year, attended school, cannot read or write, insane, idiotic, pauper or convict.

Since the 1850 census the types and specificity of information has continued to increase. In 1860 the value of a person's personal estate was included. In 1870 additional information on foreign born parents, children born within the year, number of males over 21, and number of males declined the vote were included. Starting with the 1880 census, city addresses, relationship to head of household, marital status, months unemployed, sickness/disability, crippled and parent's birthplace were included. In the 1900 census the month and year of birth, age, years married, number of children born to the mother and how many were still living, year of immigration, numbers of years in the U.S., naturalization, own/rent, free/mortgage and farm/house were included.

The 1910 census included more information on a person's type of business, whether they were employer/employee or worked on their own account, and their veteran status. In the 1930 census the value of the home or monthly payment, whether or not there was a radio set in the home, and the age at first marriage was included.

Paul shared with us a number of search techniques that he uses to find the seemingly "unfindable." He showed us very useful examples of search and browse options where the name of the person being searched for is not used but other very specific data like age, birth-date and birthplace are. While these search methods were presented in the context of a census search they have a much broader application.

Paul highly recommended reading The Census Book by William Dollarhide. This book is now available on-line through the King County Library System. Also recommended was Ruby Coleman's "Outsmarting the Census Enumerator, Transcriber and Indexer." Thanks for an outstanding program, Paul! (Submitted by EGS member and research assistant Bob Barnes)

She is an exemplary volunteer – not one to seek the limelight – so many of us have benefited from her expertise behind the scenes – always there for me – what big shoes to fill – she knew so many people – she was very good to pass on news to me.

These are a few of the comments I heard referring to our first Volunteer in the Spotlight, Gloria Peck Brown, a member and driving force behind EGS since 1985.

Many will remember Gloria and Myra McDowell working behind the supply table. What you might not know is that they carried books and supplies to genealogy events as far away as Portland. According to Myra, she "inherited" Gloria when she volunteered to take over the duties of the Supply Table chair. Gloria had the experience whereas Myra had just joined EGS. Over the years, Gloria was invaluable and they became friends. Myra says Gloria was always one of the "Indians" – never a "Chief" – which is so typical of her DOING the job to be done, out of the limelight.

Gloria took care of EGS mail, researched queries from mail requests, called new members and provided one-on-one assistance. She helped organize and implement EGS genealogy seminars. She proof-read the EGS Bulletin and wrote articles for it. While writing the Books in the Library column, she got to know the librarians. She has provided EGS library help, and donated or recommended many books for the EGS collection, and was one of the original members of the Library Acquisition Committee. She provided many articles of interest for use by the SIGs, the Bulletin editors, and others. When asked how she, an Irish researcher, came up with so many articles of interest to the Italian SIG, she stated Italy comes right after Ireland.

Gloria also worked on the EGS project to create the Vital Statistics Books extracted from the Bellevue American Newspapers.

She was Sunshine Chairman for a number of years and attended EGS Board meetings.

Here is a cute story she shared with me. Her husband, Bill, took a phone call from their daughter's high school classmate. He told her their daughter was doing graduate work at the U.W., working on a Ph.D. in "genealogy." (The Ph.D. was in genetics.)

Gloria's advice to anyone who feels shy about volunteering: It's the best way to meet people and get a lot of help with genealogy. Everyone is most generous and genealogists love to talk and share what they've learned.

Thank you, Gloria. Who could count the hours you have so generously dedicated to EGS – not just an institution, but a group of caring individuals. We love you.

EGS SCANDINAVIAN INTEREST GROUP

Meeting Summary, Tuesday, January 9, 2007

Our first meeting of the year was enhanced by the attendance of four new folks who came armed with questions and comments about their search for Scandinavian ancestors.

Two sisters, Suzanne Leavitt and Joanne Eichner, are looking for roots in Copenhagen. They've looked in "the usual places" with few results, and our best advice for the moment was to consult someone at the LDS Family History Center who is familiar with the Danish records.

Gary Saaris is looking for a way to find the community from which some folks emigrated. Our best suggestion was to look in the "police registers" reflected in the Emigranten CD, where records were kept of each emigrant from the main Swedish ports of debarkation, and the agents who arranged their passage, with the original goal of keeping all the deals honest.

Ron Cross had more suggestions than questions, having already located several family lines back 400 or 500 years. One of his suggestions was that one can locate court cases in the U.S., indexed by year and name, in the American Digest System, available at the U.W. Law Library.

On February 13 we will have a "show and tell" meeting, where we bring items of interest from our ancestral homelands to share with the group. All are welcome.

CZECH AND SLOVAK THANKSGIVING MEETING

Actually, they do not celebrate Thanksgiving in the Czech and Slovak Republics, but they do have the word DIKUVZDANI, to give thanks.

We started our November 11th meeting with a Thanksgiving potluck. The fire station never smelled so good before. Watching each person tell about the food they brought was so heartwarming. Fond memories radiated as they told stories about the dish. Many brought recipes for their dish. Sitting down to share a meal brought all kinds of networking, I enjoyed watching the folks learn more about each other.

The firemen at Fire Station #22 joined us and learned a lot about the Czech and Slovak food and culture. Fast! Music for this event was provided by Fred Gessner, Slovak music expert.

With content tummies, we started our meeting. Jo Herber was so excited! The DNA testing proved the Murgas' she met in her ancestral Slovak village are relatives!

Our roundtable format of sharing produced much more valuable information for attendees. We have information on genealogy tours coming up in the Czech and Slovak Republics this year. Websites were shared, a member gave a report on the UW Czech language and Czech Cultural Center reception for Czech Ambassador Petr Kolar that netted almost $1000. Ruze Gresser brought wonderful hand embroidered linens to share.

Our next meeting on January 27th will have a special mini lesson on using the FHC Austrian Empire Military Records microfilms.

NEW NETHERLAND, NY, ANYONE?

Margaret Amory, a member since 1999, would love to talk to you if any of your ancestors settled in New Netherland, NY. She is also researching surnames Amory, Rensen, and Alberti. You may contact her at 206-275-1441.

TRACING FAMILY ROOTS THROUGH DNA

Have you ever met someone with the same last name and wondered if you might be related?

Tracing one's family history is rapidly becoming a favorite pastime. Inevitably, at some point you will find that you can't validate the information you uncover or you'll find yourself running into brick walls.

Today, however, there's another way -- utilizing technology to verify ancestry. DNA tests are most useful in determining genetic links between people who may have little documentation or oral history to guide them. DNA -- the "gene" in genealogy can answer questions when there is no available paper trail.

"DNA is nothing more than a tool in the toolkit for the genealogist who has run into a paper trail roadblock," says Bennett Greenspan, president/CEO of Family Tree DNA, the Houston-based company that is considered the world leader in genetic testing for genealogical research. "With DNA testing, we are able to unravel that history book that is contained within the cells of all of us."

Bennett Greenspan, founder/CEO of Family Tree DNA, will speak on genetic genealogy in Seattle's Stroum Jewish Community Center on Monday, February 12, at Temple Beth Israel (Eugene, Oregon) on Tuesday, February 13, and at Portland's Mittleman JCC on Wednesday, February 14. His presentation begins with Jewish history, DNA testing and his own genealogy that resulted in the founding of Family Tree DNA. He explains how family relationships are determined through DNA testing. He also shows how the company can come to the rescue when the paper trail ends or traditional genealogy hits a brick wall.

A quick basic biology refresher is enough to explain how the science of DNA testing helps family history researchers. There are two types of DNA --Y-DNA (paternal) and mtDNA (maternal) - - which allow us to explore our ancestry. Greenspan will speak to what researchers can expect from testing and what we can all learn.

Also to be addressed: What do you get and what do your results look like? What can you learn from the results? So what do all those numbers really mean?

Family Tree DNA allows individuals to compare results against one another to see if they are likely to share a common lineage and whether or not there are any mutations between them.

"Tracing Family Roots through DNA" will be presented at 7:00 PM, Monday, February 12, 2007 at the Auditorium, Stroum Jewish Community Center, Mercer Island.

UW OFFERS PROGRAM IN GENEALOGY

The University of Washington offers a nine-month evening certificate program in Genealogy and Family History that prepares students to conduct their own genealogical research into family history with an understanding and appreciation of the social and historical context within which their ancestors found themselves.

The program starts each fall, meets one evening a week for three quarters, and culminates in a family history writing project in the spring. The program starts in autumn 2007.

Full information about the program can be found at www.extension.washington.edu/ext/certificates/gfh/gfh\_gen.asp

WEBSITES TO TRY

- Today in Weather History can supply significant weather for any date in American history. It won't have the weather for every location for every day, but it lists most of the major storms, heat waves, tornadoes, hurricanes and the like. If the weather was bad enough to be recorded in some ancestral documentation, it may well be detailed here.
www.weatherforyou.com/history/.
- A new search engine targeted at people aged 50-plus called cRANKy.com launched on Tuesday. Billed as the first age-relevant search engine, the developer of the engine designed it to deliver the most targeted results for this demographic. They did this by applying a "50-plus lens to every query". So the results are based on both search technology, reviews and users ratings.
www.cranky.com/
- The UK National Archives has announced that everyone can now access the first comprehensive database of passenger lists from ships departing the UK on long-distance voyages to destinations including North America, Australia, India and South Africa between 1890 and 1960.

www.nationalarchives.gov.uk/

- Richard Michael Doherty and Elizabeth Kelley Kerstens are once again sponsoring genealogy research trips to Ireland. Imagine researching your Irish ancestors on their own turf. Imagine finding solutions to your pesky research dilemmas. Imagine sharing your successes with fellow researchers over a pint in an Irish pub.
www.celticquest.net/
- You have to wonder what goes through the minds of new parents when they decide on the name of their new offspring. Think about poor Humperdink Fangboner, who grew up to be a lumber dealer in Sandusky, Ohio. Of course, his wife Fanny Fangboner didn't have it much easier. Some of these names sound like they came out of a W. C. Fields movie. To see some of the strangest names that you will ever see, look at

WEBSITE DESIGN FOR THE GENEALOGIST

Would you like to put your genealogy information online? Or perhaps you are interested in placing the extracted taxpayers' records from the nineteenth century onto your genealogy society's web site? Maybe your genealogy society doesn't yet have a web site but would like to? You now have a web site that can help.

Patricia Geary has created a web site that should interest many genealogists. "Website Design for the Genealogist" includes tutorials on web site design, a discussion of stylesheets, descriptions of software tools to make the job easier, and links to many other web sites that contain similar information.

Strictly speaking, "Website Design for the Genealogist" is not just about genealogy. Almost all the information on this site can be applied to the creation of any web site, genealogy-related or not. However, it is nice to see the focus on placing genealogy information online. In fact, I'd suggest that you start with Patricia's article, "Planning a genealogy website?"

"Website Design for the Genealogist" covers

FREE OFFER*FREE GENEALOGICAL RESEARCH HELP:

Genealogical research help is available at the Bellevue Regional Library at NE 12th St. and 110th Ave. NE in Bellevue. Eastside Genealogical Society volunteers are waiting to help you with problems and questions. They are available in room 6 on the second floor of the library, to the left of the reference desk. Hours are Tuesdays from 7-9 PM and Wednesdays from 1-3 PM.

many of the aspects of creating static web pages. This is a great method of creating lists of a few hundred or even a few thousand ancestors. The site does not cover the methods of creating more complex online SQL databases or other dynamic web sites that can store information about tens of thousands or even hundreds of thousands of individuals. It also does not cover the creation of "for pay" sites that restrict access to some pages while giving open access to other web pages.

If you are one of the few people who plan to create very large online databases or restricted access web sites, you will need more sophisticated tools. However, "Website Design for the Genealogist" should cover the needs of 99% of today's family historians.

Patricia Geary's "Website Design for the Genealogist" can be found at www.genealogy-web-creations.com.

HIBBERT'S GORE, POPULATION: ONE

Many of our ancestors lived in small towns. In some cases, the towns and villages where they lived were very small. However, one place in Maine has the smallest population, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. In fact, it would be impossible to have a smaller population.

The U.S. census for the Year 2000 lists Hibbert's Gore, Maine, with the following information: Total population: 1. Number of blacks: 0. Number of Asians: 0. Number of whites: 1. Population under 18: 0.

That's right, the total population is one, and that would be Karen Keller. Hibbert's Gore is an unincorporated area of 640 acres in northern Maine. In several northeastern states, a "gore" is a location that is not claimed by any county. There are no stores, no street lamps, and no mailboxes in Hibbert's Gore. It cannot be found on very many maps.

The U.S. Census Bureau does not publish personal information about individuals, such as salary and occupation. However, the Bureau does publish the average salary of every town, village, and other location. Since this location has but one citizen, the average is the same as the one person's personal data. In effect, Karen Keller's income will be published.

Karen Keller's income is probably rather low, as are her expenses. She lives alone without electricity or running water. She claims that she is not a hermit or a loner or an extreme naturalist. However, she has struggled all her life to control bipolar disorder. She cannot deal with the confines of city life, or even of small-town life, without drugs. She prefers to live a drug-free existence; therefore, she lives in a house in the wilderness and is not encumbered by the conveniences of central heat, running water, or electricity.

50-year-old Karen Keller heats her small A-frame home with a wood stove and hauls her own water by hand. She calculates that two gallons of the water is a quick shower while five gallons provides a shampoo. She lives mostly off the land, hunting deer with a bolt-action rifle and growing her own vegetables, fruit, and herbs. She splits her own firewood. She heats water on her wood-burning stove and then funnels it through a camper's shower.

Keller spent her youth between Schenectady, New York, and Midland, Michigan. She received a bachelor's degree in natural resources at the University of Michigan and spent much of her adult life in the woods of Quebec. She lived in Vermont for a while but finally found the peace she seeks in the woods of northern Maine in that quiet place called Hibbert's Gore: Population One.

NEW YEAR RESOLUTIONS

It is New Year's Eve 1852 and John Smith sits at his desk by candlelight. He dips his quill pen in ink and begins to write his New Year's resolutions:

1. No man is truly well-educated unless he learns to spell his name at least three different ways within the same document. I resolve to give the appearance of being extremely well-educated in the coming year.

2. I resolve to see to it that all of my children will have the same names that my ancestors have used for six generations in a row.

3. My age is no one's business but my own. I hereby resolve to never list the same age or birth year twice on any document.

4. I resolve to have each of my children baptized in a different church - either in a different faith or in a different parish. Every third child will not be baptized at all or will be baptized by an itinerant minister who keeps no records.

5. I resolve to move to a new town, new county or new state at least once every ten years - just before those pesky enumerators come around asking silly questions.

6. I will make every attempt to reside in counties and towns where no vital records are maintained or where the courthouse burns down every few years.

7. I resolve to join an obscure religious cult that does not believe in record keeping or in participating in military service.

8. When the tax collector comes to my door I'll loan him my pen, which has been dipped in rapidly fading blue ink.

9. I resolve that if my beloved wife Mary should die I will marry another Mary.

10. I resolve not to make a will. Who needs to spend money on a lawyer?

11. I resolve to not clutter up good farm pastures with headstones that will just get broken or fade with time anyway.

12. I resolve to protect my family and friends privacy by giving false names and places for events.

13. I resolve to never give the correct accounts of misdeeds in the family so when Uncle Lem shot that guy and was tried for murder, my kids will be told he stole a cow.

14. I resolve to never trim the family cemetery of brush and tangleweed to keep out any one doing that silly Genealogical work.

15. I resolve to always alternate my kids' and wife's first and middle names when the census taker comes around just to give him practice with his spelling.

16. I resolve to come from Ireland where there are no records or if there are they can only be examined by visiting the exact village, pleading with the local clergy (who is hostile to anyone not of his belief - which of course you are) and/or handing over a fee equal to or exceeding your yearly income for one hour's research which may not find anything.

17. I resolve that not only shall I NOT die in my country of birth but nor shall my children (yea verily) unto the sixth generation.

18. I resolve that I shall call my children by odd names which the enumerator shall spell incorrectly.

19. I resolve that I shall be absent on the night of the census.

20. I resolve that if unable to be absent on census night I shall endeavor to be enumerated twice.

21. I resolve that when I die my children/wife are instructed to give the wrong details for my death certificate.

22. I resolve that I and most of my family shall die suddenly just before death certification is brought in - in a parish where easy access to the records ceases the previous year.
