Date: Thursday, May 10, 2007

Time: 6:30 PM Welcome new members,

Supply table open

7:00 PM Meeting

Place: Bellevue Regional Library

Subject: "Your Most Fascinating Ancestor"

Speaker: EGS Members and guests

ABOUT THE PROGRAM

May's program will feature: "Your Most Fascinating Ancestor!" Genealogists love to talk about their families and here is your chance. Tell us in a few minutes, all about your favorite ancestor—the notorious, famous, eccentric, talented, heroic, whatever. We're all ears! (Where else could you possibly find a more receptive audience?) Everyone has some, so pick one and come to the meeting and share!

[Submitted by Judy Meredith, EGS Program Chair]

ELECTION OF OFFICERS

Election of officers will take place at the May General meeting. This is an uneven year and we will be voting for Vice President, Treasurer and Trustee. The candidates are Vice President, Bob Barnes, Treasurer, Pete Clarke and Trustee, Sharron Filer. The candidates are presently serving in these offices and have agreed to serve for another term. Additional nominations from the floor will be accepted.

MESSAGE FROM THE BOARD WHAT ARE BYLAWS AND WHY SHOULD I CARE?

We've heard a lot recently about the US Senate being stalled because they can't get a 60 vote majority. It's because of a Rule of Order called cloture, which prevents a simple (51%) majority from overriding the minority and forcing a vote.

Did you know that EGS's rules are based on the US Senate rules? They are called Robert's Rules of Order, after General Henry M. Robert III, who wrote them all down in 1876. Now, can you imagine EGS running by the rules of the Senate? They are too complicated for us, and we use a much-simplified version, but our rules refer to Robert's Rules in case our own rules break down. Our rules are called the EGS Bylaws.

Why do we have bylaws with all those complications? They explain how to handle arguments. They protect you from anyone who might want to take over the Society. A group of members might want to gain control, or a runaway EGS Board might not be protecting your interests. Your protection from such people is our bylaws, which explain how we—the Board and the members—have to work.

You vote on some officers every year, and on the bylaws every time they are changed. In those votes you are voting your confidence in the rules and the board that keep EGS running. Just as in the United States Senate, you elect people you trust to have your interests in mind. (Err, is that a joke?)

Suppose some greedy people wanted to get their hands on our $10,000 in savings. They could try to get elected and then appoint committee chairpersons who support their views. The bylaws protect you by giving you control over the Society officers. You have the right to see the budget, financial reports and board minutes whenever you want. A responsible board will ask for your opinion even if the bylaws don't say they have to, especially on money questions.

That's why it's important to understand the bylaws and get to know your five elected officers: President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer and Trustee. You vote directly on the candidates who form the Executive Board, which has final approval of all decisions and is directly responsible to you.

In May we are re-electing three of these five people. All of the candidates are experienced board members, but it is up to you whether they represent your interests in EGS. Call and interview them. Come to the meeting to vote. Our bylaws don't currently allow absentee votes by members — perhaps you think they should? You don't vote on the budget or changes to it—do you think you should?

The bylaws and all these procedures are meant to protect you from us, especially if there is conflict. They should be strong for the worst case —they aren't needed in the best case. Read your Bylaws, available on the EGS website at www.rootsweb.com/~wakcegs/ EGSBylawsrev2006.pdf, or ask for them from the Secretary (me!). Ask questions of any of the elected officers (listed in the back of the Bulletin). It's your right to know what's going on in the Society, and our responsibility to know our duties to you.

SUMMARY OF THE 12 APRIL MEETING

New Vice-President Bob Barnes conducted the meeting, introducing his two months of remaining tenure filling the previously vacated position. We hope he will be around much longer lending his talents to EGS. Four new members introduced themselves and the family names they are researching. As always, we welcome the "new blood" and the interests they will share.

Several announcements began the business meeting.

- 1. The May meeting will include election of officers, and the program will be members invited to tell stories of some family history experience or how they discovered previously unknown facts.
- 2. Ideas are needed for EGS participation in the Bellevue Strawberry Festival.
- 3. Available written sources of research information include donated magazines from the German Interest Group.

4. Remaining EGS books being offered with Kim Nichols handling the sales table, and a good selection of genealogy books in the Bellevue Library.

Guest speaker Pat Richley, also known as "Dear Myrtle," was introduced and began an extensive presentation on "Finding Your Elusive Female Ancestor." She stressed the importance of writing bibliographic citations, and cited Legacy Family Tree, Family Tree Maker and Roots Magic as programs useful in keeping notes and organizing family information. When looking for parents of a female ancestor, recommended books with different approaches, "Discovering Your Female Ancestor," and "The Hidden Half of the Family" (by state organization) are just two of many sources to consider. Distinguish between family tradition and documentation, both of which are integral to a good understanding of family.

Women's historic inferior legal status, and the frequent and inconsistent changing of that status, adds more challenges to a genealogist's research. For example: Connecticut was the first state to allow divorce, other states followed at different times. Woman only received the right to vote in America in 1920, and just a few years ago in Ireland. From Colonial times to the Civil War a widow was not allowed to make decisions for her own children. A male guardian had to be appointed.

Good Proverbs

Not one shred of evidence supports the notion that life is serious.

It is easier to get forgiveness than permission

My idea of housework is to sweep the room with a glance

A balanced diet is a cookie in each hand

Some ideas for pursuing the research: The Family History Centers have a wealth of information. Look for wills, which generally don't show a wife's maiden name, and for probate records, which stipulate much more and may include maiden name, brothers and other information that can lead to discovery of your mystery woman's parentage. Always look for laws in effect at the time you are researching. Numerous books are available (not everything is online yet). Find relevant books for your state of research. Excellent sources of information if you have Virginia heritage are the Virginia State Library and Historical Society. Inter-library loans are available if your local library doesn't have your book of interest. Contact the local genealogy society in the area of your research.

To better understand your ancestor's experience, become informed on the lives of those whose time and place she shared. How did they dress? What were societal norms? What unusual behavior might have been practiced by some?

For example drug addiction seems a modern phenomenon, but in the 1800's use of morphine and opium was sometimes quite prevalent among widowed, married or unmarried women, especially in middle or upper class. Some doctors' wives and southern plantation women used these drugs in home remedies. This clue may help understand the times, but you likely won't find your mystery woman on some "users" list!

Look at naturalization laws, which changed from time to time and influenced records you may want to research. Between 1804 and 1906 a widow became a citizen if her husband had filed a Declaration of Interest, but died before naturalization - she needed only to take an oath of allegiance. From 1855 to 1922 a wife's citizenship was automatic if her husband was a citizen. After 1922 an "alien" woman who married an American or naturalized citizen had to apply for citizenship on her own. In 1873 an African-American widow had to produce records documenting the marriage.

Veterans' pensions sometimes extended to widows and may provide valuable documentation. From 1780, a Revolutionary War widow received half the deceased officer's pay for seven years. Civil War pension files name the spouse and all family members , including the children's birth dates. Pensions could extend only to the children named by the soldier. (Some much younger wives remarried and had more children.) Look for second marriages. Confederate pensions are by state. Texas veteran benefits were different - soldiers from either side were entitled to land. Some veterans of the Indian War may have received federal pensions.

Important women's information may be found in diaries, letters, family bibles and notations in newspapers including society pages or family news. A project is now under way to scan and digitize newspapers broadly and it will be available "free". Church records, parish books, baptisms & marriages may be available by county and area. The practices varied in record keeping and access allowed. Some Protestant Church minutes tell when members transferred congregation or denomination, which happened occasionally. Determine the locality and what churches were there at your target time. City Directories from the late 1700's to early 1800's list churches. The Family History Center is a good place to start looking.

Miscellaneous hints: In the late 1800's, Italian and some Irish women used their maiden names when travelling, even though married. Put your ancestor in the historical perspective of her time. Clearly label ancestors photos by name and date. The style of dress, hair and personal items add interest and can help set approximate date, if not known. Points of view differ by person and generation. See www.Amazon.com (Find everyday life in various times.) Also see Godey's Lady's Book (On line) 1855-58. Some items of interest that can reflect the essence of your ancestor's life story include quilts, implements, tea pots, or pictures of same from the era. Put them together with photos, if you have them, or pictures of the garments or needlework items of the time. Check Roots Web mailing list for surnames. Try www.Archives.org which sometimes has information that has been deleted from web sites. Put together a story about your ancestor with name, time, names of known relatives and dates, and send to (genealogy group?) in the area of research. Note that you are still looking for her parents' names. You might get lucky! Cemeteries often have more information than on the headstones. Check it out. Take a trip to your ancestral home - very important in gaining information and insights. Ask relatives to identify and give any missing information they may possess.

Pat's informative talk reinforces the fact that, as in all genealogy research, when looking for that elusive female ancestor, you are led to a study and better understanding of history, geography, societal laws, customs and traditions. Even if you never find all her lineage, you gain a perspective on her surroundings and the kind of life she probably lived, and even its impact on her descendants -including yourself. For every new bit of information you gain about that elusive ancestor there is an "Aha!" moment of great joy and satisfaction. That's genealogy - a welcome distraction from today's often disturbing news and travails. Thanks to Pat for sharing her helpful insights.

EGS SCANDINAVIAN INTEREST GROUP

Meeting Summary, Tuesday, April 10, 2007
The Scandinavian Interest Group meeting was spent exploring Internet sites devoted to genealogical pursuits in Sweden, Norway, Finland, and Denmark. Our meeting room is equipped with an overhead projector that can display the computer's screen image on a movie screen, making it very easy to show home pages, search results, maps, and other goodies plucked from the Internet.

We did not look for specific data this time, but were interested in finding sites that contain databases searchable for free. Norway's national archive is a leader in the effort of putting church books and other vital records online for free searching. We've heard a rumor that Denmark's national archive is beginning a project to put church records online for free searching, but did not find an active site. Sweden's archives are working on similar resources, but at a seeming snail's pace. There are several local genealogical societies in Sweden which use volunteers to put church books online for free searching. At this point the widest assortment of Swedish databases are on a pay site, www.Genline.com, which charges fees similar to those of our own Ancestry.com.

A Swedish site, www.eniro.se, contains zoomable maps that can be superimposed on aerial photos, similar to the satellite photo databases provided by Google.com. Gene Fagerberg found his cousin Karin Josefsson's house at the base of Taberg Mountain using this site.

Another Swedish site, www.lantmateriet.com sells maps of various scales and types. The site contains a search engine that can find [correctly spelled!] place names and display the selected place on a map, along with a list of similar names.

Members reported a couple of "brick-wall breakthroughs" this month. Sandy Arildson found her grandmother and her 3 children leaving Liverpool for New York in 1893, in a passenger list at the site www.findmypast.com. This site links to one called www.ancestorsonboard.com, a work-in-progress database of passengers outbound from England to ports around the world, including the U.S. The database is being assembled by www.findmypast.com in association with the British National Archives. This is a great place to look for folks from 1890 onward, even though they might be absent from the Ellis Island database. Norma Wakeley found information about her grandmother by posting an enquiry to Vestre Toten, Norway. Her grandmother emigrated from Oslo on April 28, 1876, when she was a child, age 11, and traveled with Ann Marie Martinsdotter, age 24, a person unknown to Norma. A Florida relative's History of the Korsen Family contained information about Norma's grandmother's uncle, and Norma noted that his wife was Berta Helena Martinsdotter Amlien. When Norma e-mailed her relative to inquire, she found that Ann Marie Martinsdotter was an older sister of Berta's!

Come see us at our May 8 meeting at the Puget Sound Regional Archives on the BCC campus.

All books and supplies have been marked down, so shop early to take advantage of the savings and for the best selection. Once the books are gone, we will not be reordering except for special events and speakers.

One book you may want to look at is Getting It Right - The Definitive Guide to Recording Family History Accurately, written by Mary H. Slawson, a local Redmond author. This book originally sold for $19.95 and is now on sale for $12.00. This guide book helps you eliminate time-consuming duplications in your family history research by showing you how to record the information in a standardized way. You'll learn the rules and language you need so your research will fit smoothly and efficiently into the jigsaw puzzle of family histories being assembled around the world. This book offers a systematic approach to recording information in a way that will benefit families now and for generations to come. [Submitted by EGS Bookstore/Supply Table Chair, Kim Nichols]
