

Clallam County was organized in 1854 and was formerly part of Jefferson County. It was named after an Indian tribe and means “strong people.” It is located in the far northwestern corner of the state on the Olympic Peninsula. Its county seat, Port Angeles, was named in 1791 by Captain Francisco Eliza. In May of 1798 the Spanish attempted to establish a fort at Neah Bay; it existed for only five months. In 1887 the Tatoosh Island lighthouse was built to aid navigation in the Strait of Juan de Fuca. Olympic National Park was created in 1938. Today the county has a varied economy based on wood products, food processing, mining and tourism.

Bounded by: Strait of Juan de Fuca (N), Pacific Ocean (W).
