

Yakima County was founded in 1865 from Ferguson County, which is no longer in existence. It was named after a local Indian tribe and is located in the south central part of the state. The county was first settled in 1858 after the Indian wars of 1855-57 resulted in the formation of the Yakima Indian Reservation. In the 1870s cattlemen and farmers began constructing irrigation systems.

Growth continued into the 1880s, with the coming of the Northern Pacific Railroad creating a boom in the county. In 1950 the federal government began a major series of irrigation projects in the county that had profound results. Today Yakima County is one of the nation's richest agricultural counties. It leads the state in apple, pear, peach and grape production, while beets, hop and mint growing are also important. Its economy also encompasses wood products and food processing industries.

Bounded by: Kittitas County (N), Grant and Benton counties (E), Skamania, Lewis, and Pierce counties (W), and Klickitat County (S).
