Marriage of Sary (Sarah) LEMMONS to James MELTON in Hardin Co., Kentucky.

Note from Norma Karter: the marriage record reads: Abraham Lemmons and Sary Melton surety issued November 1, 1815. Surety by James Melton. However, in the body of the bond it states that James Melton is the groom. I'm assuming that Abraham was the surety and they confused the groom and the father. The marriage record shows no bond (probably because of the error). It reads James Melton and Sarah Lemmon married November 5, 1815.

History of the Lemmon Family

James, John, and Robert Lemmon

Robert Lemmon with brothers John and James emigrated to America from Ireland in 1750, settling in Baltimore, Maryland. They remained there for a number of years agitating the question in favor of American liberty and when wars came they were in the front lines and the heat of battle. Robert Lemmon and his brothers entered the army during the French and Indian War, and served under General Edward Braddock and his Aide de Camp, George Washington. They were in the Battle of Fort Duquesne on July 9th, 1755, on the occasion of defeat and mortal wounding of General Braddock. At the outbreak of the American Revolution the three brothers again entered the services of their country--this time as Captains in the Maryland and Virginia lines. Captain James Lemmon was killed in the Battle of Brandywine. Captain John Lemmon survived and upon the termination of hostilities moved with his family to Green County, Kentucky, was known as Nelson Co., until 1792, where he settled on and improved a fine farm upon the banks of the Green River--known far and wide as "Lemmons's Bend." He reared a large family, the greater portion of whom subsequently became pioneers in the new States and territories. His great-grandson, Major Alexander C. Lemmon, settled in Dallas, Texas in 1869 and it is for him that Lemmon Avenue in Dallas is named. After serving in the French and Indian War, Robert Lemmon was married to Eleanor Davis--born in Wales and of the Jefferson Davis lines. In 1786 they moved to Kentucky and settled at Elk Creek, in Shelby County, and he died there after 1800.
