FROM THE PRESIDENT

2008 Programming Challenge

Upon entering the New Year, my sincere hope is that everyone had a happy and joyous holiday season. We anxiously await hearing about any new tools, with which to dig for family roots that Santa may have brought.

Periodically, I remind myself that in addition to facilitating collection and preservation of genealogical information, that our society is also obligated to inform both the membership and community, as well as help identify and utilize a wide range of resources for genealogical research. Your elected Board of Advisors is also committed to member participation as we seek to fulfill your needs.

Hence, in this context, I am renewing the call for guidance and suggestions as the Board of Advisors seeks out interesting and relevant, programs and activities for the coming months. Enclosed in this Newsletter you will find a questionnaire asking your preferences for future programs and activities. Please take a few minutes and complete the questionnaire; and in the process, do not be shy in suggesting additional topics and recommending persons who might present informative and/or instructive programs. Collectively, members of the Society represent a wonderful array of talent and contacts – let's use it all!

Having your responses and suggestion in hand before February 15, 2008 will be most helpful. Additionally, if you have notes of research relevance or interesting new findings, research tips, etc., do send them to Rich Appel, Newsletter Editor.

Thanks for your help- ...Arch

GENEALOGY FEATURE

HARFORD COUNTY SURNAMES AS GIVEN NAMES

by: ...Jon Harlan Livezey

In Scotland during the 17th century, a new custom arose: the practice of giving surnames for first names, usually only among those belonging to the Protestant faith. The Catholic pressure to name one's children after saints was gone, and parents were free to experiment with "new" names.

The practice of giving surnames for first names often began when boys (frequently firstborns) were given their mother's maiden name, either as a first or as a middle name, in order to honor the mother's family. For example, when John Fox married Mary Kyle, their son might be named John Kyle Fox.

Giving a child one or two surnames-for-a-first-name was originally a practice of the aristocrats, the people most concerned with family ties and legacies. For generations, these kinds of names only existed in families connected with the original surnames (Percy Bysse Shelley was a cousin of the Percy family, for example). Gradually, the practice spread. Indeed, 19th-century American upper classes took to it so readily that it filtered down through the middle classes to the lower classes. After that, the idea of surnames-for-first-names transitioned from relatives' surnames to anyone's surnames [taken from Edgar's Name Pages, © 2001 <http://www.geocities.com/edgarbook/names/frames.html> ]. It is these Harford County family or community related names that are of particular interest.

As a lifetime genealogist of Harford County families, with a particular interest in personal names, I am always alert to local examples where all of a person's given names are also surnames.

Most of those whose names are examples of this phenomenon are deceased; many are from the 18th or 19th centuries. Current citizens with all surname monikers include CLARK PITTS TURNER and NELSON WYLIE HOPKINS.

Most women with surnames as given names do not come within the purview of this, but there can be cases where the name adopted after marriage may qualify where the full maiden name will not. The late HOPE HARLAN DALLAM was a descendant of the Hope family; her maiden name of Arid Hope Harlan would not qualify. Because the first name, although distinctive within the family, was not a surname.

Numerous examples developed out of others; MORGAN MITCHELL bore his mother's surname as his first name; his grandson MORGAN MITCHELL RICKEY and his relative MORGAN MITCHELL HUGHES were in turn, named for him. STEVENSON ARCHER similarly had a grandson STEVENSON ARCHER WILLIAMS, who in turn had a grandson STEVENSON WILLIAMS CLOSE. Unrelated citizens, such as STEVENSON WILLIAMS SHERMAN and STEVENSON WILLIAMS NAGLE, named in his honor, do not qualify to be listed as local incidents of this pattern.

In addition to those mentioned, the following names of Harford County individuals qualify.

GRAFTON BAKER
JARRETT TYLER BALDWIN
TYLER BALDWIN
KENNEDY BAY
STEVENSON ARCHER HUGHES

PRESTON McCOMAS
PACA MOORES MAYNADIER
MALCOLM WALKER MITCHELL
RAYMOND NELSON MITCHELL
SILVER MITCHELL OSBORN

... and a cousin of our President ARCHER JARRETT TAYLOR

Readers are encouraged to submit other Harford County examples for publication in the Newsletter. Please try to include the family or community connection to each of the person's given-names. Email examples to the Editor at Richard.Appel3@verizon.net or mail them: Attn: Richard Appel, Editor, at the HCGS address shown in the Newsletter banner.
