

St. Petersburg Town — 1900 —

A Directory and Census Transcription

The front cover photograph is used by the courtesy of the St. Petersburg Museum of History. It is a view looking west on Central Avenue from the smoke stack of the first power house, which was located on the waterfront where the St. Petersburg Yacht Club now stands. The Paxton House hotel is on the site of the Ponce de Leon Hotel today and beyond that can be seen tower of the Detroit Hotel in the second block on the north side of Central. The tall trees seen at the extreme right background are in what is now called Williams Park. The square tower off to the left was Edwin Tomlinson's Marconi tower behind his house at Fourth Street and Third Avenue South.

Foreword

The town of St. Petersburg, Florida, was first surveyed and platted in 1888 by A.L. Hunt, chief engineer of the Orange Belt Railway, from some 500 acres of land owned by John C. Williams, one-half of which was eventually deeded to the railroad company. A census was taken in 1890, but these records have been lost with the rest of the 1890 federal census. According to an article in The Evening Independent (St. Petersburg, 26 Mar 1914), the 1890 population was 271. As an indication of the village size in 1892, the vote in February to incorporate the town was tallied at 15 to 11, and fewer than 40 citizens voted in the first election of town officials later that year. But the town had grown rapidly by the time of the census taken in June 1900 when the population stood at 1575 individuals in 437 dwellings.

This directory was compiled from a transcription of the 1900 census sheets published by the U.S. National Archives as micropublication series T623, roll 170, for the census enumeration district 57, Precinct 1, Hillsborough County, Florida. (Pinellas did not become a separate county until 1911.) Of the 1575 individuals listed, 28 entries were entirely illegible and about 100 more were partially obscured.

This transcription of the 1900 census sheets and the compilation of the directory were made by Tom Ziebold, St. Petersburg, Florida. The author acknowledges the assistance and encouragement of the Pinellas Genealogy Society and the St. Petersburg Museum of History.

Contents of the Directory

Section 1 of the directory includes individuals who were either head of household or not immediately related to the head of household (e.g., boarders, servants, or in-laws). If the person was married, the spouse's name is given. Where known, the individual's occupation is listed. The census enumerators did include a street location for the dwellings, but no street number was given. (There may not have been any.) The dwelling number assigned by the census enumerator is given in the last column. This probably indicates a sequential location on the street, but not necessarily so. One can imagine the census taker gathering his data by walking down one side of a block and back the other, but he may also have gone back and forth across the road.

Section 2 lists the same people but arranged in order of street and census dwelling number. This is roughly a cross index to the town. At least it indicates who were neighbors. Note that in 1900 the east-west avenues ran from First Avenue on the north side (today this is Fifth Avenue North) to Tenth Avenue on the south side. What was Sixth Avenue then is Central Avenue today, and Railroad Avenue is now First Avenue South.

Section 3 is a transcription of the census information. Some columns have been omitted, and states have been given modern abbreviation. In order from left to right the columns are:

1. Pg. This corresponds to the census page numbering from 1A to 16B. The large ledgers had left and right hand sheets numbered as A and B in the microfilm record.
2. Ln. The line on the page. There were 50 lines on each sheet.
3. Street. As given in the marginal column.
4. Dwl. This is the census dwelling number in the order of visitation.
5. Name. As given by the census enumerator. Where illegible a ~ (tilde) mark is used. Spellings are retained as in the original and may vary, e.g., Mary, Marry; Margaret, Margarett.
6. Rel. Relation to head of household. Abbreviations are: dau=daughter, bdr=boarder, motil=mother-in-law, fatil=father-in-law, broil=brother-in-law, sisil=sister-in-law, st son=step son, st dau=step daughter, gr son=grand son, gr dau=grand daughter.
7. Clr. Color of person: w=white, c=colored.
8. Sex. Gender of person: f=female, m=male.
9. MoB. Month of birth: 1=January, 12=December.
10. YoB. Year of birth.
11. Age. Age at last birthday. The census was taken in June 1900.
12. Mar. Marital status: m=married, s=single, d=divorced, wd=widow or widower.
13. Yrs. If married, number of years married at time of census.
14. Born. State or country in which individual was born. Modern abbreviations are used for states.
15. Father. State or country in which individual's father was born.
16. Mother. State or country in which individual's mother was born.
17. Occup. Individual's occupation.
