Alvin Karpis Is Caught By G-Man At New Orleans

Public Enemy No. 1 Is Taken To St. Paul To Face Trial; Captured Without A Battle

TAKEN BY PLANE

St. Paul, Minn., May 2. - (U. P.) Shackled hand and foot, Alvin Karpis, public enemy No. 1, was flown to St. Paul in an airliner chartered by G-man today.

The stammering, pasty faced gunman, captured at New Orleans last night without a shot being fired, probably will be tried for kidnapping William Hamm, Jr., wealthy brewer.

Long-delayed, the big airliner slid into the airport at 8:45 a. m. and roared directly into the hangar of the 109th U. S. air squadron.

The door slammed shut and newsmen as well as spectators were barred.

A dozen G-man from the St. Paul headquarters were waiting to help shift Karpis to a waiting automobile. Ten federal men commanded by J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the federal bureau of investigation, who made the arrest last night, where board the airplane.

Karpis was given a bountiful breakfast after being taken to the federal building. He ate heartily.

Commenting on the capture in New Orleans, Hoover said: "Karpis was arrested at 3343 Canal Street, New Orleans, where he was living with Fred Hunter and a woman posing as Mrs. Hunter."

GUARDRAILS ARE ERECTED

Fence Constructed Along Deep Ditch on Route 27, North Of Berne

Members of the state highway crew are this week erecting guardrails along the creek 2 and ½ miles north of Berne, along Federal road 27. The rails are being erected from the bridge spanning the Blue Creek, to the small bridge one-half mile south of Blue Creek. A deep open ditch running parallel to the highway has offered dangers to motorists, especially during winter weather when roads are icy.
