N.B. SOLDIERS WITH CANADIAN FORESTRY CORPS IN SCOTLAND

By ROD MUNRO

Canadian Forestry Command

HOMEBREAD IN SCOTLAND

One of the key elements of the Canadian Forestry Corps was the planting of trees. This activity helped to provide a sustainable source of wood for the war effort.

Canadian soldiers were known for their hard work and dedication. They worked together to plant thousands of trees, ensuring that the forested areas remained healthy and strong.

Today, the planting of trees continues to be an essential part of the Canadian Forestry Corps. The legacy of these heroes lives on, providing a valuable resource for future generations.
