

African-American Obituaries

Danville, KY, Advocate-Messenger

1 Jan 1992 through 31 December 2015

PLEASE NOTE: These entries were gleaned from obituaries printed in the Danville Advocate-Messenger, the Harrodsburg Herald, or from funeral home records of the area. NOT EVERY AFRICAN-AMERICAN who died or was buried in the area is listed. In finding for these obituaries, I searched for such terms as "AME," "Smith-Jackson," "Hilldale," "Duncan Hill," "Springhill," in short, terms which have historically been associated with African-Americans. Since cemeteries are now integrated, some of these entries may well be of non-African-Americans, and I may have missed some African Americans who were buried out of traditionally "white" funeral homes, or in traditionally "white" cemeteries. However, in Danville at least, references to an A.M.E. church, Bate, or to the Smith-Jackson Funeral Home, or even to the Hilldale Cemetery, are often good indications that the deceased was, in fact, African-American, and I have assumed that in these entries.

BARTLESON, Norman Bartleson, 75, died Saturday. Arrangements are pending at Smith Jackson Funeral Home, Danville. Mon, 17 Sep 2012. Boyle loses NAACP leader. By DAVID BROCK dbrockamnews.com The area lost one of its longest serving champions of racial equality and a bridge to the American civil rights movement of the 1960s with the death Saturday of Norman Bartleson. Bartleson, 75, of Danville had been president of the Danville- Boyle County chapter of the NAACP since the early 1970s and was the highest ranking of the seven statewide vice presidents of the Kentucky NAACP. He died after a prolonged illness. Bartleson was born Nov. 6, 1936, in Harrodsburg and graduated from Westside High School in Harrodsburg. After moving to Danville, he was a mail carrier for the U.S. Postal Service for 33 years. Agnes Bartleson said her husband of 55 years the couple would have celebrated their 56th anniversary on Christmas Day cared deeply about the community and his church, First Baptist, Second and Walnut streets, where he was a trustee, taught men's Bible study and sang in the men's chorus. Bartleson was also on the local Human Rights Board and was past head of the Danville-Boyle County Recreation Department, where he also worked for years as an umpire for youth sporting events. The man who likely will move into Bartleson's role as local NAACP president, Marvin Swann, grew up with Bartleson as his biggest role model. Swann, the group's current vice president, who handled most of the master of ceremonies duties at last month's NAACP banquet, was emotional when describing the role Bartleson played in his life. "Above all) he's probably become my best friend, and I'm going to miss him," Swann said, noting the travels he and Bartleson took to state and national conventions. Swann, a high school student when he met Bartleson in the early 1970s, became even closer to his mentor when he graduated from college and got involved with the NAACP. "He's taught me how to be patient, to do the research before. I speak on something. He's really been training me all along for this time." Kentucky NAACP President William Cofield said the state has lost an important figure. "I knew Norman for more than 20 years, and he was both a wonderful person and a tremendous supporter of the NAACP," Cofield said. "We are going to miss him. He loved that community, and he was NAACP inside and out" Former Danville city manager and lifetime NAACP member Paul Stansbury got to know Bartleson soon after arriving in Danville, while working on an interim basis at city hall. He said Bartleson was a good listener who was adept at effecting change within the system, recalling a time when Bartleson came to city hall with concerns about gates being locked at Jackson Park. Stansbury said he and Bartleson, along with others, convened regularly to talk about ways the city could increase diversity among its workforce, which led directly to several African-Americans joining the staff. "This community has lost one of its very fine leaders," Stansbury said. "I think you have to look at Norman beyond just his role with the NAACP here locally. He was a leader in the city, the region, the state and beyond." James Hunn, secretary of the local NAACP chapter, also knew Bartleson from church and their kids coming up together. "He set an example for others to follow," Hunn said. "He always encouraged people to become involved, whether it be NAACP or other things." The problems the NAACP tried to tackle in recent years were ones Bartleson had long seen born out and sought to remedy close to home, including access to health care and education. However, it was voting equality, something he remembered as a disputed right, that remained a major passion. "He would be out right now getting people registered to vote," Swann said. "He lived at a time when voting wasn't a given. He didn't take it lightly, and he wanted everyone to exercise that American right no matter what party they voted for." The Bartlesons have three daughters, Larita (Basil) Smotherman of Indianapolis, Delphine (Rickie) Chenault of Atlanta, and Bonita Bartleson of Danville and Lexington; and three grandchildren. Visitation will be 4-6:30 p.m. Thursday at First Baptist Church, Second and Walnut streets, with a celebration of life service to follow at 7 p.m. at the church. Burial will be 11 a.m. Friday in Maple Grove Cemetery in Mercer County. Smith-Jackson Funeral Home in Danville is in charge of arrangements. Mon, 17 Sep 2012. BARTLESON, Norman Bartleson 1936-2012 Norman Mottes Bartleson, 75, transitioned Saturday, Sept. 15, 2012, at Ephraim McDowell Regional Medical Center in Danville. Born Nov. 6, 1936, in Harrodsburg, he was a son of the late Walter Bartleson and Viola Black. He was the devoted husband of 55 years to Agnes Neal Bartleson. Celebrating his life are his daughters, Larita (Basil) Smotherman, Delphine (Ricky) Chenault and Bonita Bartleson. To carry on his legacy are three grandchildren, Tao (Corey) Mosley, Austin Chenault and Basil Smotherman. He leaves to cherish his memory a loving sister, Shirley Bartleson; a mother-in-law, Vernocia Neal; and a host of loved ones. Norman was a member of First Baptist Church Second and Walnut Streets at 200 W. Walnut St., Danville. He diligently served and chaired the Trustee Board. Norman was a retired Danville postal carrier, current president of the Danville-Boyle County chapter of the NAACP, first vice president of the Commonwealth of Kentucky NAACP, lifetime member of the NAACP, a Kentucky Colonel, past member of the Human Rights Board and past chairman of Danville-Boyle County Recreation Department. Visitation will be 4-6:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept 20, followed by a Celebration of Life at 7 p.m. at First Baptist Church Second and Walnut Streets. Interment will be 11 a.m. Friday, Sept. 21, at Maple Grove Cemetery in Harrodsburg, Ky. In lieu of flowers, memorial gifts can be made to the Danville-Boyle County NAACP Scholarship Fund, P.O. DAVIS, William E. "Bunny" Davis. Davis dies, at 84. William E. "Bunny" Davis, 84, a community leader in sports, business and government, died Friday at Ephraim McDowell Regional Medical Center. Friends said Davis will be greatly missed in the Danville community. "First of all, he's a good man," said the Rev. Richard Hill of First Baptist Church, Second and Walnut, who was Davis' minister. "He was a chairman of our trustee board. He taught Sunday school, a junior boys class, for years. He was an excellent person, one of my staunchest supporters at the church. He will be very much missed by all of us who knew him and loved him." Hill had known Davis for almost 28 years. Hill was the minister at Mill Street Baptist Church in London, when he was called to the Danville Church. "Bunny came up to London and moved me and my family here. That was in 1974." State Representative John W.D. Bowling, D-Danville, former mayor of Danville, saluted Davis' commitment to his community. "When Bunny believed in something, he was very passionate about it," Bowling said. "He was a great supporter of mine, but even more importantly, he was a great friend of mine. We talked a lot about all different issues. Bunny was a very professional, articulate man, and I'll say this Bunny loved his community very much, and I could see that in him all the time." ""BSwling and Davis had been instant friends since 1969, when Bowling moved to Danville; "The chemistry was just automatic," he said. He had been to the hospital to visit Davis in recent days and support Davis' widow, Lillian, Bowling said in an interview Saturday. "On the private side, he was a very compassionate man, a very giving man. I know some instances where he's literally helped people out of his own pocket without wanting anything in return. A lot of people didn't know that about Bunny Davis. He is truly going to be missed bodily, but his spirit will always remain with this city and this community." Davis, who played football, basketball and baseball in high school as well as semi-pro baseball before the game was integrated, went on to coach soft-ball, umpire baseball and lead Little League. His nickname "Bunny" came from his fast running on the football field and after he once ran the 100-yard dash in 9.7 seconds. An All-State and All-American basketball player at old Bate High School, Davis was "I know some instances where he's literally helped people out of his own pocket without wanting anything in return." State Rep. John Bowling inducted into the state Sports Hall of Fame. He played baseball on the Lexington Hustlers, the first integrated baseball team in the South. He also was the first black to umpire at baseball games in the Southeastern Conference and Kentucky High School Athletic Association. He was no stranger to honors. Davis, was honored in 1997 when the Agora Club was renamed the William E. "Bunny" Davis Recreation Complex recognizing his sports career as well as his years of donating time as recreational director. "That is the nicest thing that's happened to me. (The commission) really honored me by naming the club in my honor," he said in a 1998 interview. While in high school, Davis was named a nationally-ranked basketball forward for the Ail-American Negro High School basketball team. As a semi-pro baseball player in the '40s, Davis played against Jackie Robinson, the man who first broke the color barrier in the game, and other baseball legends such as Willie Mays, Satchel Paige and Roy Cam-panella. . Davis was the first black man to umpire baseball games in the . Southeastern Conference and the Kentucky state high school tournament, serving as clinic director. For years, he donated all his umpire earnings to his church He also founded Bunny's Moving and Service, a moving van company that was affiliated with Bekins Moving and Storage. He retired from the moving business in 1982 when he sold his moving company. He served as doorkeeper of the Kentucky House of Representatives for 28 years, 15 of those as chief doorkeeper. Davis was responsible for introducing important visitors to the representatives. Longtime State Representative Joe Clarke said Davis was "a good guy." "He'd do anything for you and he loved the legislature," Clarke noted. "He hung on down there as doorkeeper probably longer than he should have. He was not in good health the last several years. But he was quite a guy. Norman Bartleson, president of the local branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, knew Davis not only for NAACP but also from joint participation in church and on sports fields as well. "We've lost a pillar of our community," he noted. "He was someone to look up to and Danville will truly miss him. People wouldn't realize how much he has done. "And he coached me in basketball at West Side High School in Harrodsburg" in the early 1950s, Bartleson said. "I knew him in the sports world. I played with and against him. We both played baseball." Bartleson called Davis "a role model for all." Davis was proud of his sports background and frequently prefaced comments at commission meetings with, "You know, I'm an athlete from way back." Ford, 28, of 764 Stoner St., was pronounced dead at 6:45 p.m. at the scene by Boyle County Deputy Coroner Mike Wilder. She died of multiple chest injuries. Ford was a passenger in a 1994 Ford Escort driven by Morales Alejandea, 20, of Perryville. He was charged with no drivers license, no seat belts in use and no insurance. Alejandea and Robert L. Stone, 28, of Springfield, and his passenger, James Stone, suffered multiple injuries and were taken to Ephraim McDowell Regional Medical Center. Their conditions were not available at presstime. Robert L. Stone also was charged with driving on a license suspended for DUI. No seat belts were in use in the Stone vehicle, a 1988 Oldsmobile Cutlass. Born April 18, 1933, in Jeffersonville, Ind., he was the son of Jesse and Lucille Hill. He was pastor of First Baptist Church, Second and Walnut, for 31 years and served as pastor emeritus since retirement. He was a veteran of the U.S. Army. He is survived by his wife, Mary Ross Hill; his children, Richard Hill Jr., Dana (George) Yeast and David Hill; one nephew, Michael Baines; 13 grandchildren, 16 great-grandchildren and a host of other relatives and friends. A second visitation will be noon Friday at First Trinity Missionary Baptist Church in Jeffersonville, Ind., with burial to follow in Eastern Cemetery in Jeffersonville. Smith-Jackson Funeral Home is in charge of local arrangements. Sun, 19 Aug 2012. HILL, Richard Eugene Sr: In more than three decades as a pastor, Rev. Richard Hill touched people far beyond the walls of his own church. The Jeffersonville, Ind., native, who spent 31 years leading one of Danville's landmark religious institutions — First Baptist Church, Second and Walnut — died Thursday at age 79. "He was a pastor in the truest sense of the word, who was so concerned about everyone's spiritual growth," said granddaughter Janna Hill. "He not only talked the talk, but he walked the walk. He wasn't any different when he walked away from the pulpit than he was in public.". Hill came to Danville in 1974 after spending 12 years at Mill Street Baptist Church in London. First Baptist's membership grew from about 200 to more than 1,000 during his tenure, but it was the baptisms, conversions and chances to be part of people's lives he relished as much as full pews. . In a news story about Hill's retirement from the pulpit in 2005, he spoke to a reporter about developing a love for the church where he would spend most of his life. "Every time we passed by First Baptist, my wife, Mary, and I would comment on how beautiful it was and how lucky the pastor was to have this church," said Hill. "It would be a dream to be the pastor here, I thought then. I never dreamed I would or could be.". Those who knew him said he took education seriously and after his graduation from Jeffersonville High School in Indiana. He attended an Indiana University extension program in Jeffersonville, followed by a two-year stint in the U.S. Army. He earned bachelor's degrees from Simmons Bible College in Louisville and Cumberland College, along with a master's degree from Union College. Hill eventually followed the path of his grandfathers and was ordained a minister in the National Baptist Convention of America Inc., a predominately African-American denomination. He was a past president of the Danville-Boyle County Ministerial Association and the Kentucky Baptist Unified Christian Leadership Conference. "Rev. Hill often told of how he came from humble beginnings, but he was so concerned with getting educated in order to do God's work that he would ride his bicycle from Jeffersonville across the bridge to Simmons Bible College in Louisville," said Minnie Frye, who has been a member of First Baptist for 56 years, most of them with Hill as pastor. "He was well known, not only in this community, but across the state and country for being an educated man of God. People said he was a 'Christian gentleman' and that was really true. Other pastors respected him a great deal.". Hill's involvement in the community was widely felt, including his role in helping revitalize the local NAACP chapter. Among his many service activities, he spent time on the boards of the local Red Cross and the Danville Housing Authority, which allowed him to focus on fair housing for all Danville residents, a personal passion. "The highlight of this ministry, in my opinion, is the great number of people that we have helped," Hill said in the 2005 article. "Scores and scores and scores of people, both black and white. We have provided food and temporary shelter and paid the bills for local people in financial crisis and also paid for vouchers so the transients coming through this community could have a meal at a local restaurant and stay at a local motel.". Family and friends said Hill always had a keen interest in helping people who had problems or had made mistakes in their lives. Prior to devoting himself full time to ministry, he worked as a field services coordinator with Cumberland River Comprehensive Care in Corbin, dealing with those addicted to drugs and alcohol. Another of Hill's granddaughters — and Janna's twin sister — Lanna Hill, said his compassion wasn't confined to Danville. During a phone call to her grandparents following the 2010 earthquake that devastated Haiti, she said she could hear Hill weeping in the background as he watched news reports about the hardship people were experiencing. "He thought about others no matter what their race, gender, ethnicity or age," said Lanna Hill. "His love just transcended all of those boundaries." . Sisters Priscilla and Mavis McCowan, who came of age in Hill's church and have been lifelong members, recalled Hill serving as a mentor and an example through his knowledge of and strict adherence to scripture. They said he was just as likely to reach out to someone in a jail cell as he was a shutin. Priscilla McCowan, though, said it was a trip Hill made to visit their ailing father that left a lasting impression about how much he cared for others. Several years ago, when McCowan's father was scheduled to be admitted to a Lexington hospital for surgery at 6 a.m. on a January morning following a massive ice storm, Hill beat the family to the hospital. As much as he cared for others, Hill's own family said he delighted in being with his loved ones. Janna Hill, a Danville native who now lives in Atlanta, will remember a doting grandparent who loved spending time with his family, which included his wife Mary, children Dana Yeast and Richard Jr. and David Hill, 13 grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren. Hill also was a needed male influence in the lives of his granddaughters. Janna Hill said he eagerly filled the role and helped her avoid the pitfalls many young women face when a father isn't actively involved. "I was so lucky to have him as a father figure," Hill said. "I never felt like I missed out on anything because of his place in my life." For complete obituary information see page 2 of today's The Advocate-Messenger. Sun, 19 Aug 2012.

RAINES, Jenny Kennedy. LOSBANOS, Calif. — Jenny Kennedy Raines, whose family nickname was 'Lob,' short for lobster, died March 5, 2013, at Kaiser Permanente in Modesto, Calif. She was 86. She was born Feb. 15, 1927, as Jenny Christine Kennedy in Garrard County, Ky. Actually, as the story goes, she was born Feb. 14, 1927, but her father went out and got drunk and didn't file the paperwork for the birth certificate until the next day. She was the last of 11 children born to Jenny and Richard Kennedy. When she was born, Jenny was one of two sets of twins her mother had given birth to. Jenny's twin sister died when she was a year old. At age 8, Jenny went to work with her mother, who helped her develop her strong personality, work ethic, sense of self and dedication to family and God. The family relocated to the Danville, Ky. area where she attended Bate School. By age 25, Jenny was married to William 'Bill' Turner and had two children, Elbert Thurman, born Dec. 20, 1946, and Edith Christine, born July 30, 1949. But her marriage didn't last. In 1973, she married an old high school friend, Thomas Leon Raines, a Korean War veteran and long distance truck driver. The pair had randomly reunited while walking down a Danville, Ky., street and quickly kindled a loving relationship that lasted 40 years. The pair then relocated to San Jose, Calif. With housekeeping as her trade, Jenny's resume included spending three decades working for some of Kentucky's elite. In California, she cared for the elderly, as well as worked at San Jose Hospital, Santa Clara County Valley Medical Center and Government Services Agency, from which she retired. Upon retirement, she and Thomas moved to North Highland, Calif. In 2011, Thomas fell gravely ill with cancer and was returned to Kentucky, where he passed on Nov. 30, 2011. After Thomas' move to Kentucky, Jenny went to live with her daughter and son-in-law in Los Banos, Calif. When she was able to, her hobbies included sewing quilts and repairing garments, as well as crocheting blankets. She was a whiz in the kitchen, doing everything from scratch, including grinding meats, jarring jellies and baking pies. She enjoyed jazz and blues music. Her favorite artists included Jimmy Smith and B.B. King. Jenny loved to dance, even with her cane, then walker and wheelchair. Jenny is survived by her son, Elbert, a.k.a. 'Brother,' daughter, Edith, a.k.a. 'Sister,' son-in-law, Alvin Draper; granddaughter, Ramona Lesa, a.k.a. 'Gopher,' grandsons Elbert Thurman, Jr. a.k.a. 'Bugs Bunny,' and Steve Alexander, a.k.a. 'Smurfy Smith,' as well as great-grandsons

Elijah Andrew and Jacob Isaiah. Her parents, siblings and husband preceded her in death. Her funeral was held Thurs., March 14, 2013, at Whitehurst Funeral Chapel, 1840 Center Ave., Los Banos, Calif. A memorial and celebration of life was held at her daughter and son-in-law's home. Contributions may be made to your favorite charity.
