VICTORIA GOLDFIELDS

Audrey King submitted the following great range of video and audio materials, related to 'regions' of Victoria, that are now online. Great to enjoy, and perhaps inspire you in creating your next family or local history project.

Videos:

For example, under <http://www.visitvictoria.com/videos/> select 'Regions', then 'Goldfields' then have a look at, say, 'Bendigo, Castlemaine and Maldon' or 'The gold rush to Mount Alexander'.

A u d i o T o u r s :

There are also 'podcasts' that you can download and put on your mp3 player, and listen to as you walk around. eg. 'Gold Rush to Mt Alexander Tour? Goldfields' <http://www.visitvictoria.com/displayobject.cfm/objectid.17D24493-6CF6-425A-8A275B05F209D622/>

HAWKESBURY FAMILY HISTORY FAIR

The Hawkesbury Family History Fair was held in the Deerubbin Centre at Windsor on Saturday, 7 August. Our society had a trade table and it was a very busy day. The general public kept coming in all day for talks and to have a look at the exhibitor's tables. Joan gained information for her World War II book, actually spoke to a WWII Armourer who had worked in the Glenbrook Tunnels (he must be at least 90) and most importantly, we were also able to assist many researchers.

NATIONAL ARCHIVES OF AUSTRALIA

Research made easier. The National Archives has made searching its online database even easier for the public. A new version of RecordSearch introduces both basic and advanced screens that are linked to the NameSearch and PhotoSearch catalogues and the Passenger arrivals index. The new screens also offer a wider range of options for more experienced researchers and allows users to specify items that have a digital copy available online. RecordSearch includes 8 million records, including 1 million digitised records.

RYERSON INDEX

While Ryerson volunteers are indexing 177 papers, there are 747 (and still counting) papers published in Australia, so they need a lot more volunteers to join. If you can help, please contact Pauline Kettle, the Secretary at the official email address ryerson-index@tpg.com.au

IRISH WEBSITES

Church of Ireland records for Dublin City, county Kerry and county Carlow are now online: <http://www.irishgenealogy.ie/>
This is an ongoing project so keep checking. Also remember that some church parishes cross county borders, so the record you are after may be under a neighbouring county. You could also try <http://ifhf.brsgenealogy.com/>, but this is a pay-per-view site

Don Graham attended the Nepean Family History Society talk by Ray Thorburn last Saturday and he has submitted a list of Irish websites. Here are some, I will publish the balance next month or email me at jank@efel.com.au for full list:-
