WHO IS A GENEALOGIST?

A GENEALOGIST is a person who has enough pride in his/her family to want them to be remembered for generations to come. He knows that they are important in his own genetic background, and wants to know more about them. This fills him with anticipation.

He is willing to spend many hours, even years, to find all the information he can to reconstruct their lives. In doing so, he finds that each is truly a unique individual influenced by his genetics, birth order, ethnic makeup, economics, natural disaster, and local and national history. But the events that shaped his life most of all were the choices he made.

A GENEALOGIST learns more about himself as he follows the lives of his ancestors. He begins to identify with a lot of the struggles that accompany the ancestor's lifestyle, and becomes more tolerant of everyone.

While researching the past and interviewing relatives, he realizes that he can be a catalyst to unify the present-day family. He organizes reunions and stimulates discussion between members, producing collections of audio and video tapes, charts, and photographs that bring them closer together. They become acquainted as friends, and not just names on a family tree!

A GENEALOGIST is an inquisitive person--a persistent person who is on a quest for identity and the place his ancestors had in the history of this country. He is an intellectual person who chooses to invest his personal time in the study of records and history in order to document his family's story. Therefore, he is always learning, growing, and bringing factual credence to some of the old folk tales in the family.
