PRESTON,

Lancashire, 22 miles from Lancaster, and 212 from London, is as handsome and as large a town as some cities. It has a stone bridge over the Ribble, by which it is plentifully supplied with fish, coal, &c. stands on a delightful eminence, and is a very gay place, with assemblies, balls, &c. as at York; not only for the variety of gentry that resort thither in the winter from many miles round, but from the residence of the officers that belong to the county palatine, and is called Proud Preston, though not near so rich as Liverpool and Manchester. Camden derives the name from Priest's Town, because of the friars here. It was first incorporated by Henry II. and is governed by a mayor, recorder, eight aldermen, four under aldermen, 17 common councilmen, and a town clerk. Its markets are on Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday; the last as considerable as any on the north side of the Trent for corn, fish, fowl, &c. Fairs are, March 27, for three days, Sept. 7, and the first Saturday after Jan. 6. Every 20th year they have a guild, or jubilee, which begins the last week in August, and continues a month. Here is a charity school for 25 boys, and another for 25 many girls. On the neighbouring common, where are frequent horse races, there are the traces of a Roman military way from Ribchester to the mouth of the Ribble. The Earl of Derby has a grand house here, which makes a noble appearance, and the houses in general are very well built. By the late inland navigations, it has communication with the rivers Mersey, Dee, Guse, Trent, Derwent, Severn, Humber, Thames, Avon, &c.; which navigation,
