WARRINGTON,

Lancashire, 182 miles from London; has a fine stone bridge, the last over the Mersey, leading into Cheshire, whose middle arches were broken down in 1745, but since restored; and is a large, neat, old built, but populous town, with a considerable market on Wednesdays, noted for lampreys, and all sorts of fish, flesh, cattle, corn, potatoes, &c. The malt made here is so good, that the ale brewed with it is said, not to be inferior to the best in England. It is full of good country tradesmen, and has a particular market every week for linen, called huckaback, the manufacture of its neighbourhood; and it is said, that 500l. worth or more, is sold every market day. It has manufactories of pins, sail cloth, and copper works. In the church are some fine monuments. A new chapel was consecrated here in 1760. Here is a Presbyterian academy, on the plan of a university, now reduced to a large school, for want of resources; twenty-four boys are taught and clothed here, some of the boys are taught grammar, till they are old enough for apprenticeship; and then they have a bible, common prayer book, and a suit of clothes given them. As this town lies on the great road to Carlisle and Scotland, it has always been judged as a pass of the utmost importance, in the time of war or rebellion. In the river are caught sturgeons, green-back, mullets, soles, sand eels, lobsters, oysters, shrimps, prawns, the best and largest in England; with other shell-fish, and muscles in such abundance, that they serve to manure the ground. The fairs here, are July 18; and Nov. 13.
