Stephenson v. Wellman	438-K

AFTER 34 YEARS.

HEROIC RESCUER REWARDED WITH A FORTUNE.

Peter Andersen, a farm labourer of White Bluffs, Washington, has just inherited a fortune amounting to £72,500 under most romantic circumstances. Andersen, who was too poor to buy wallpaper, had covered the walls of his cottage with newspapers.

Recently he noticed an advertisement in one of these papers asking for information of his whereabouts. He replied to the advertisement, and on establishing his identity he was informed that he was heir to the sum named. He received a draft of £1,000 to enable him to come to New York to collect the balance. Andersen left Denmark in 1873 aboard the ship "W. P. Gottry," which was wrecked off Newfoundland. He was a powerful swimmer, and, seizing Peter Knudsen, a drowning passenger, kept him afloat until they were able to crawl on some wreckage which floated them both ashore. After much privation both reached New York, where they separated.

Knudsen made an immense fortune in the glove business in New Jersey, and has now bequeathed it to his rescuer.—Weekly Times, March 29th, 1908.—83-27-C.
