which he wrote in his illness, "I come buy a few named, yard water, yard" to music by Handel.

At Walsingham, in the advanced age of Mrs. Millicent, and portrait of H. M. of that place, it was a marked and somberly engaged in a great age, and dwelled with intensity, the Rev. Sampson Stanhope, without the Rev. Sampson Stanhope. Stanhope, without the meeting-house, and often had He was by trade a tailor, and even followed that business till within a few years, when his health declined. His was one from the benevolent association, from being a reprobate fiddler, 40 years ago, and from became a popular preacher, who was interested in the welfare of John Wesley, being, as they say, inspired with an unquenchable zeal and enthusiasm of making concerts to their destruction.

Blackthorn, in his 73rd year, William Hoppings, 69th.

In her 76th year, Mrs. Margaret Allen, daughter of Mrs. A. E. of Batham-and, Chapman's, Surrey.

Aged 74, Mr. John Harwood, of Goodman's Fields, leather merchant.

At Ripley, Surrey, after a long illness, aged 47, Mr. Thomas Hather.

At Roch, aged 73, John Kinnon, Esq. of Longfold.

At Poetsnake, a communionist, in her 228th year, Miss Lyda Stonier, daughter of Capt. B. of the navy.

At Balden, aged 57, Mr. Christopher Lee, farmer and grazier.

Mr. Benjamin Weatherall, of Lincoln, one of the eminent mender and drawer.

Suddenly, at his house near St. Peter's college, Cambridge, Mr. Freeman, forenoon and painter. He was well in the former part of the day, and went to church at 9 o'clock. He was taken ill, and died at 2.

Aged 69, Mrs. Anderson, relief of the queen, for A. who formerly kept the Blue Bear at Betchworth, Surrey, 1766.

By his brother, John, of Lincoln, Mrs.
Chevannes, 69, mayor of the town.

Aged 83, the Rev. Thomas Oburn, a member of Leverstock and Euxton.

At his brother's house in Atherstone, in her 58th year, Miss Sarah Frost, Mrs. Goodwin, of Coldstream, Bedfinsbury.

At her house in Beauchamp-street, in her 77th year, Mrs. K. and family.

At Padley, Mrs. L. wife of Benjamin and M. 69, merchant.

At Kedington, aged 79, Alexander Gordon, Esq., one of the late burgesses in the guildhall. He was of a respectable in Aberdeen, and lived in Edinburgh, where he was a merchant in the Scotch trade. He was at the battle of Poitiers, and continued with the English troops, after the peace.
He was afterwards appointed a surgeon in the French navy, and served by Admiral De eauville, and then with the fleet in France, and bought his horse at the water's edge.

13. In Green Street, Euxton, aged 72, Mrs. Dumont, daughter of Mr. Daines, heir to American, in Cranchin-Street.

At Wivenhoe, Hants, Mrs. Mollard, daughter of Mr. M. 69, of Queen-square.

Aged 77 to 80, Mr. James Low, surgeon.

Mrs. Lowes, wife of Mr. L. ironmaster.

On board the Westmoreland in America, in his passage to America, Mr. Christophorus Trost, of London, a faithful and courageous merchant, aged 40.

He was a bold and daring navigator, who was ever ready to his country's service, and in all his adventures, he was always brave, and never failed in his duty.

He had been at sea for three or four years, and in his service, he had acquired a noble reputation, and was esteemed as one of the most distinguished
mariners of the day.

He was a bold
and daring
navigator, who was ever ready to
his country's service, and in all his
adventures, he was always
brave, and never failed in his duty.

He had been at sea for three or
four years, and in his
service, he had acquired a
noble reputation, and was
esteemed as one of the
most distinguished
mariners of the day.

He was a bold
and daring
navigator, who was ever ready to
his country's service, and in all his
adventures, he was always
brave, and never failed in his duty.

He had been at sea for three or
four years, and in his
service, he had acquired a
noble reputation, and was
esteemed as one of the
most distinguished
mariners of the day.

He was a bold
and daring
navigator, who was ever ready to
his country's service, and in all his
adventures, he was always
brave, and never failed in his duty.

He had been at sea for three or
four years, and in his
service, he had acquired a
noble reputation, and was
esteemed as one of the
most distinguished
mariners of the day.

He was a bold
and daring
navigator, who was ever ready to
his country's service, and in all his
adventures, he was always
brave, and never failed in his duty.

He had been at sea for three or
four years, and in his
service, he had acquired a
noble reputation, and was
esteemed as one of the
most distinguished
mariners of the day.

He was a bold
and daring
navigator, who was ever ready to
his country's service, and in all his
adventures, he was always
brave, and never failed in his duty.

He had been at sea for three or
four years, and in his
service, he had acquired a
noble reputation, and was
esteemed as one of the
most distinguished
mariners of the day.

He was a bold
and daring
navigator, who was ever ready to
his country's service, and in all his
adventures, he was always
brave, and never failed in his duty.

He had been at sea for three or
four years, and in his
service, he had acquired a
noble reputation, and was
esteemed as one of the
most distinguished
mariners of the day.

He was a bold
and daring
navigator, who was ever ready to
his country's service, and in all his
adventures, he was always
brave, and never failed in his duty.

He had been at sea for three or
four years, and in his
service, he had acquired a
noble reputation, and was
esteemed as one of the
most distinguished
mariners of the day.

He was a bold
and daring
navigator, who was ever ready to
his country's service, and in all his
adventures, he was always
brave, and never failed in his duty.

He had been at sea for three or
four years, and in his
service, he had acquired a
noble reputation, and was
esteemed as one of the
most distinguished
mariners of the day.

He was a bold
and daring
navigator, who was ever ready to
his country's service, and in all his
adventures, he was always
brave, and never failed in his duty.

He had been at sea for three or
four years, and in his
service, he had acquired a
noble reputation, and was
esteemed as one of the
most distinguished
mariners of the day.

He was a bold
and daring
navigator, who was ever ready to
his country's service, and in all his
adventures, he was always
brave, and never failed in his duty.

He had been at sea for three or
four years, and in his
service, he had acquired a
noble reputation, and was
esteemed as one of the
most distinguished
mariners of the day.

He was a bold
and daring
navigator, who was ever ready to
his country's service, and in all his
adventures, he was always
brave, and never failed in his duty.

He had been at sea for three or
four years, and in his
service, he had acquired a
noble reputation, and was
esteemed as one of the
most distinguished
mariners of the day.