The image displays two identical blank Gantt chart templates, one above the other. Each template consists of a central horizontal axis with a grid of vertical lines. The axis is bounded by vertical lines on both ends, with small diamond-shaped markers at the top and bottom of these boundary lines. Above and below the central axis are two rows of diagonal lines, each starting from a small diamond-shaped marker on the left and extending to the right. The top row of diagonal lines is positioned higher than the bottom row. The central axis is divided into segments by vertical lines, with thicker lines indicating major intervals and thinner lines indicating minor intervals.
