Tidewater Telephone Company

1948 Telephone Directory

Gloucester—Hayes Store—Mathews—Saluda

By L. Roane Hunt

Seventy-four years ago, the Tidewater Telephone Company distributed their directory for October 1948 that covered Gloucester, Mathews, and a portion of Middlesex Counties. It provides a description of the telephone technology of that time and the usage in this part of Virginia. It was only thirty-six years (1912) after the telephone was promoted in the renewed Gloucester Fair sponsored by the Gloucester Agriculture Association composed of bankers, investors, farmers, and the president of Tidewater Telephone Company, William DeWolf Dimock. The broad participation in the association suggests a desire to demonstrate technical advances that included the telephone in this fair. The 1912 Gloucester Fair is described in the Family Tree Searcher, Vol. 8, No. 2, December 2004, pp. 27-41.

Mr. Dimock moved to Gloucester in 1907 and purchased "Elmington" on the North River. He was instrumental in the formation of the Tidewater Telephone Company and served as its president until his death in 1919.

The 1948 directory includes general instructions for using the telephone with party lines, operator assistance calling, automatic dialing, and billing. There was a basic monthly charge for the telephone and a charge for long-distant calls. For Gloucester, there were long-distant charges for Mathews and Middlesex calls. The chart on the next page shows the rates of these charges for typical locations. Charges varied for the daytime versus evenings, and weekdays versus weekends. Telephone usage during business hours was the most expensive.

The directory lists telephone numbers for each user in the first section providing their name, post office location, and telephone number. Telephone residence is noted by the letter "r." Certain businesses are noted by all capital letters. The major portion of the directory is a classified section that arranges businesses under categories.

In this article, the names of each telephone user are listed as given in the directory beginning on page 4. Those names with asterisks are identified on the bottom portion of each page. Identification includes their full name followed by their birth and death dates and the names of their parents and spouses. The availability of the 1950 federal census, taken just two years after the 1948 directory, was very helpful in the identification of these users. Beginning on page 43, the general stores and grocery stores are listed from the classified section.

Mr. Dimock

Overall, the 1948 directory indicates that only a small portion of the citizens were telephone users. Users were mostly businesses and workers that dealt with the public such as doctors, insurance agents, lawyers, school teachers, plumbers, builders, and government workers, etc. Those without these special interests were mostly the older citizens. Possibly, they were individuals that were retired from careers that dealt with the public. Also, it is possible that younger adults could use their parent's telephones or the phones in their local stores.

In 1948, my grandmother did not have a telephone, but she was able to receive messages that came through the Roanes Store. In 1948, my family moved to Gloucester to live with my grandmother and operate the Roanes Store. The telephone was removed from the store, and one was installed in the adjacent residence. I remember the party lines when neighbors could eavesdrop on your calls.
